OFFICE OF FISK & HATCH,

BANKERS AND DEALERS IN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

No. 5 NASSAU-STREET, NEW-YORK, Nov. 5, 1869.

To our Customers and Correspondents:

The surprising development of our national resources, and the rapidity with which the Government is now enabled to reduce the national debt by weekly purchases, render it apparent that the time is approaching when the Five-Twenty bonds may be funded at not over four or four and a half per cent interest.

Meanwhile their high price, as compared with other classes of securities paying an equal rate of interest, is leading to general inquiry for more profitable forms of investment in which money may be safely invested.

During the war the necessities and peril of the Government, and the consequent changeness of its securities, rendered them so attractive that, from this cause, combined with the patriotic faith of the people in their safety, they absorbed almost the entire floating capital of the country, and diverted subscriptions from other classes of securities which had before been deemed sufficiently conservative and sound to meet the wants of the most cautious investors.

The Government is no longer a borrower. It no longer needs the country's capital, but desires gratefully and honestly to repay it.

The rapid accumulation of capital for investment, and the reduction of the national debt and improvement of the national credit—rendering it certain that hereafter but a comparatively low rate of interest can be derived from investment in Government bonds—is compelling the search for other safe and well-guarded channels into which capital not employed in business may wisely flow.

The enterprises of Peace, no less needful in their time and place, for the common welfare, than were the waste and cost of War, now call for the capital which the Government no longer needs, and offer for use a remuneration which the Government could no longer pay, and in some cases a security as stable and enduring as the faith of the nation itself.

The desire to capitalize the premium which may soon be realized upon Five-Twenty bonds, and which a material decline in Gold toward par, and the ability of the Government to fund them at a lower rate of interest, may at any time extinguish, is felt by many holders who desire some satisfactory assurance as to which of the many lower-priced securities in the market would afford the necessary safety to justify an exchange.

The calculations for Subscription and advice which are subjoined to this circular, show how universal is this desire for safe investment, and how much more profitable than Government securities at present prices, are those entitled to the confidence of investors.

The pressure of this want has led us to feel the importance of devoting our own attention as bankers, our large experience, and our facilities for obtaining reliable information, to the work of supplying it in some measure, and to offer the results of our inquiries to those who may be disposed to confide in our good faith and judgment.

We are unwilling to offer to our friends and the public anything which according to our best judgment is not as secure as the national obligations themselves, with which we have hitherto principally dealt our customers.

Since closing the GREAT CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD LOAN, which needed all our resources, we have carefully examined many others, but have found no other which would fully do so until the following was placed in our hands:

FIRST MORTGAGE

SIX PER CENT. GOLD BONDS

OF THE

WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY

OF CALIFORNIA.

The Western Pacific Railroad, connecting Sacramento with San Francisco, furnishes the final link in the transcontinental line of an unbroken line of rail from the shore of the Atlantic to that of the Pacific.

It is 92 miles in length, including a short branch, and it will be the

METROPOLITAN LINE

connecting the chief cities, and traversing the golden belt of rich and growing state of California, receiving, in addition to its business and extensive local traffic, the through business over the Union and Central Pacific Railroads between the Eastern States and California.

It is completed, fully equipped, and in successful operation, and its earnings in October, the first full month, enabled it to pay more than one month's bill, by a materially estimate, amounted to $[illegible] per diem, in coin, while the interest on its bonds will be but $[illegible] per diem.

The value of the property and franchises is not less than

and the amount of the mortgage is $[illegible],000.

The bonds are of $1,000 each, have thirty years to run, and will be sold at

THIRTY, AND ACCRUED INTEREST,

in currency. They are made payable, PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST, IN GOLD COIN, in the City of New-York. Coupons due January and July 1.

The near approach of the time when the United States can probably fund the greater portion of its six per cent. debt, is naturally causing inquiry for other forms of investment, which will afford security equally worthy with the same rate of interest. THE WESTERN PACIFIC RAILROAD FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS must have no superior of any other security based upon merely local or unsubstantial railroads, and may be held with as much confidence as Government bonds, or as first-class mortgages on New-York City property.

The loan is small in amount, the claims to consideration are apparent. It will be quickly taken. Bonds will be delivered as the coupons are attached.

Government bonds received at their full market value in exchange.

GENERAL HOWARD'S ANNUAL REPORT.

Review of the Work of the Freedmen's Bureau.

Improved Condition of the Colored People.

The Forthcoming Message of President Grant.

Health of Senator Grimes—The Will of Amos Kendall—The Methodist Memorial Church—Condition of Southern Banks—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The Freedmen's Bureau, so far as its organization as a physical and material help to the colored race and white refugees was concerned, expired by limitation of law on the 21st of December, 1868; but the educational work and the bounty claims business for colored soldiers was continued by the same law which terminated its material functions. No appropriations have been made for it since the Winter of 1867, and its philanthropic work of educating the children of the freedmen is now carried on by the balances husbanded from former appropriations and realized from the rental of Bureau buildings and the sale of abandoned property. In all other matters the Bureau is a thing of the past; but it still lives in this shape to do its part in removing the reproach of ignorance among the children of the South, and in protecting the colored soldier in the receipt of the bounty which Congress has said is justly his due. General HOWARD, who still remains Commissioner, has just issued his annual report, which is largely retrospective in its treatment of the operations of the Bureau. The Commissioner thus remarks upon the closing up of the Bureau under the law:

"Since my last annual report material changes have been made in the operation of the Bureau, in accordance with the acts of Congress relating thereto. The act of July 25, 1868, required the Commissioner to cause the Bureau to be withdrawn from the several States within which said Bureau has acted, and its operations, excepting the educational and county divisions, to be discontinued on the first day of January, 1869. Orders were issued and measures adopted for giving effect to the act with the least possible violence. Notice was given to officers, agents and clerks that their services would not be needed after Dec. 31, 1868. The freedmen were early informed that they must look to their civil Magistrates for protection of their rights and redress of their wrongs; that the supplies of food and clothing for the destitute, sick, helpless and aged, and the care for the sick, and transportation of laborers to new homes, and all oversight and assistance in making new contracts, must very soon cease. Disbursing officers were instructed to settle outstanding accounts and to sell the public property no longer needed, and the abandoned lands that reported but very little value; were ordered to be restored to the owners thereof, or dropped from the returns. These orders were promptly executed, and the law strictly enforced, with one exception. It was found that the Freedmen's hospitals at New-Orleans, La., Vicksburg, Miss., Louisville, Ky., Richmond, Va., and Washington, D. C., could not be closed at once without exposing many utterly helpless patients to great distress. The local authorities refused to assume the charge of these hospitals, and after consulting the Secretary of War and securing his approval, it was determined to continue them until an appeal could be made to Congress for further action. Three of these have since been closed, and only those in Richmond, Va., and in this city remain, whose continuance was authorized by an act of Congress approved April 9, 1869. The reduction of force and expenditure within the last year will be seen from the following comparison: One year ago there were on duty in this bureau 141 commissioned officers, 412 civilian agents, and 303 clerks; at present there are 23 commissioned officers, 71 civilian agents, and 72 clerks. A year ago 2,000,000 rations were distributed to the destitute costing $90,705 per month; at present no such supplies are issued, except to the sick in hospitals. At the date of the last annual report there were in operation twenty-one hospitals, and forty-eight dispensaries, with 5,980 patients and eleven thousand three surgeons; now there are two hospitals, no dispensaries, with 543 patients and five surgeons. During the last year transportation was furnished to 6,451 persons, and 4,215 packages of stores, at a cost of $[illegible] per month; now no transportation orders are issued, and the only expenditure for this service is mileage or actual expenses of officers traveling under orders, and all disbursements are now made from this office. Accurate records are kept of all financial transactions, and a minute history of every claimant's account which is settled through this Bureau. So long as the educational and bounty divisions shall be continued it will not be practicable nor safe to make any further reduction of the force now employed in this office and the several States."

General HOWARD then goes on to make an extended review of the work of the Bureau from the date of its organization, in March, 1865, down to the present time. He depicts with much force the sad condition of affairs among the race the Bureau was established to befriend. He says:

"The first reports received from these officers present a sad picture of want and misery. Though large sums of money had been contributed by generous Northern people; though many noble-hearted men and women, with the spirit of true Christian missionaries, had engaged zealously in the work of relief and instruction; though the heads of Departments in Washington and military commanders in the field had done all in their power, yet the condition of the colored people just freed from slavery had not been improved. In every State many thousands were found without employment, without home, without means of subsistence, crowding into towns and about military posts, where they hoped to find a protection and supplies. The sudden collapse of the rebellion making emancipation an actual, universal fact, was like an earthquake. It shook and shattered the whole social system. It broke up the old industries, and threatened a reign of anarchy. Even the well-disposed and humane land-owners were at a loss what to do, or how to begin the work of reorganizing society and of rebuilding their ruined fortunes. Very few had any knowledge of free labor or any hope that their former slaves would serve them faithfully for wages. On the other hand, the freed people were in a state of great excitement and uncertainty. They could hardly believe that the liberty proclaimed was real and permanent. Many were afraid to remain on the same land that they had tilled as slaves, lest, by some trick, they might find themselves again in bondage. Others supposed that the Government would either take the entire employment of their labor and support or divide among them the lands of conquered rebels and furnish them with all that might be necessary to begin life as independent farmers. In such an unsettled state of affairs it was no ordinary task to inspire hostile races with mutual confidence, to supply the immediate wants of the sick and starving, to restore social order, and to set in motion all the wheels of industry.

The Commissioner then recounts the operations of the Bureau, and the various modes whereby relief was extended. This relief was by no means confined to the colored people. The suffering among the whites was so great that General HOWARD, who had no authority to extend relief to other than freedmen and refugees, felt compelled to appeal to the country, in Congress. He says:

"And when early in 1867 we had spent nearly all the money appropriated, and were compelled to call the project was still unfinished, we asked by joint resolution approved March 2, 1867, that the Secretary of War was directed to use through this Bureau such portion of food sufficient to prevent starvation and extreme want to any and all classes of destitute or helpless persons in those Southern and Southwestern States where failure of the crops had caused great suffering, and where civil disturbance, in consequence with this resolution, he was requested to place at the disposal of the Secretary of War such portion of the public money as might be necessary for the purpose, to be repaid to him from the proceeds of said crops when they should come to market. Congress promptly responded to the call, and food was given to 88,243 persons daily, for a period of four months, no distinction being made between whites and blacks, loyal and disloyal. Adding these to the number of refugees and freedmen before given, the average number of persons daily assisted in the year ending Sept. 1, 1867, was 95,765. During the next year, ending Sept. 1, 1868, the average number assisted was 72,204; and during the last year, ending Sept. 1, 1869, the average number has been 1,925; many of the latter were children, receiving half rations only. During the same period clothing has been purchased and distributed, at a cost of $[illegible]; in addition to this a large amount of army clothing, condemned as unfit for issue to troops, was transferred to this Bureau by the Quartermaster's Department and given to the poor and needy. This exhibit of rations and clothing furnished shows that the Bureau has not been a paralyzing agency. It has not encouraged idleness and vagrancy. It has not existed for the benefit of able-bodied beggars. The wonder is not that so many, but that so few have needed help; that of the four millions of people thrown suddenly upon their own resources, only one in about two hundred has been an object of public charity, and nearly all who have received aid have been persons who, by reason of age, infirmity or disease, would be objects of charity in any state and at any time."

General HOWARD then recounts the efforts made by the Bureau to secure employment for the freedmen, and to encourage them to labor faithfully by compelling an observation of contracts on both sides. He produces much testimony of his subordinate officers to show how successful was the result of these efforts, and adds:

"A vast amount of such testimony to the industry and success of the freedmen could be gathered from the records of this office, and it is confirmed by the fact that the great mass of freedmen are now self-supporting, and that many have commenced planting and other business on their own account. In spite of all disorders that have prevailed and the misfortunes that have fallen upon many parts of the South, a good degree of prosperity and success has already been attained. To the oft-repeated slander that the negroes will not work and are incapable of taking care of themselves, it is a sufficient answer that their industry and labor has produced nearly all the food that has supported the whole people, besides a large amount of rice, sugar and tobacco for export, and two millions of bales of cotton each year, on which was paid into the United States Treasury during the three years and last year more than forty millions of dollars. It is not claimed that this result is wholly due to the care and oversight of this Bureau, but it is safe to say, as it has been and repeatedly by intelligent Southern men, that without the Bureau or some other similar agency the national finances of the country would have greatly suffered, and the Government would have lost a far greater amount than has been expended in its maintenance."

On the subject of education, General HOWARD remarks that it was, after all—

"The most urgent need of the freedmen, and from the first he devoted more personal attention to that than to any other branch of the work. Thus even before he had any funds specifically appropriated for this purpose, he organized the work of education by using the funds derived from rents of 'abandoned property,' by fitting up for schoolhouses such Government buildings as were no longer needed for military purposes, by giving transportation to teachers, books and school furniture, and by granting subsistence. In this way he was able to give material aid to all engaged in the educational work. With the aim to harmonize the numerous independent agencies in the field and assist all impartially, I appointed a Superintendent of Schools for each State, who should collect information, recommend a organization of new schools, find homes for teachers, and supervise the whole work. The law of July 16, 1866, sanctioned all that had been previously done and enlarged my powers. It authorized the lease of buildings for the purpose of education, and the sale of Confederate States property to create an educational fund. Appropriations were also made for the rental, transportation and repair of school-buildings. This enabled me to give a more permanent character to the schools, and to encourage the establishment of institutions of a higher grade. In each State, at least, one Normal school has been organized for the training of teachers, and several chartered colleges for the benefit of the people are already in successful operation. In addition to these, an institution of still higher grade, a University, has been founded in this district, incorporated by Congress, and designed to furnish facilities for obtaining a scientific and professional culture. In all the schools of every grade the number of pupils has steadily increased, and the standard of scholarship has rapidly advanced. At the end of the first year, July 1, 1866, the official report gave 975 schools, 1,405 teachers, 90,778 pupils. In 1868, the official reports give 2,118 schools, 2,355 teachers, and 1,145,[illegible] pupils. These figures do not include many private schools which have not been reported. It is believed that not less than 200,000 colored adults and children have received some instruction during the past year. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon our noble band of Christian teachers who have carried on successfully this work of education. Many of them have come from the very heart of refined and cultivated society, and have been exposed to privations, hardships and perils which would have discouraged any who were not moved by the spirit of the Divine teacher. To them belongs the credit, in a great measure, for all that has been accomplished. As much as has been done General HOWARD remarks that the need of more is still greater. The necessity, he says, 'has already led to the organization of a system of free schools in some of the reconstructed States. Until this is done in every State, and such public schools are in practical operation, the safety of the country, and especially of the South, will demand the continuance, by some agency, of the educational work now carried on by this bureau. Not only this, but Congress should be prepared for greatly extending these operations to meet the wants of the whole people. The foregoing report shows that not more than one-tenth of the children of freedmen are attending school. Their parents are not yet able to defray the expenses of education. They are doing something, probably more in proportion to their means, than any other class. During the last year it is estimated that they have raised and expended for the construction of school houses and the support of teachers not less than $200,000. They have shown a willingness to help, and as they prosper and acquire property they will assume a larger share of the burden either by voluntary contributions or by the payment of taxes for the support of schools.

The remainder of the report is devoted chiefly to a review of the work of the Bureau in the payment of colored bounty claims, which work was imposed upon it by the act of Congress of March 20, 1867. Previous to that time the claims of colored soldiers were paid upon their order to the attorneys and claim agents who had prepared and forwarded the applications. Great complaint was made that the soldiers were defrauded of their money by numerous crafty devices. Dishonest villainy imposed upon confiding ignorance, and the colored soldiers became the victims. They appealed to the bureau for protection against such wrongs.

The laws of July 28, 1866, and of March 20, 1867, provided for the protection of claimants as far as law can do it. The duties imposed by these laws upon my officers and agents have been very difficult. To discover, identify and pay claimants scattered throughout every State and Territory has been a great and perplexing task. But, by the assignment of a few agents in each Southern State to this special duty, so that they may become familiar with the business in all its details, it is done with accuracy and fidelity. Since April 17, 1867, when the first Treasury certificate was received, to the amount paid, including lawful fees and expenses, has been $6,861,417 69. The balance in the United States Treasury now due to claimants who have not yet been discovered and identified is $1,138,582 31. A complete and minute record of every claim has been so that its entire history may be easily traced. The claims already filed and settled through this Bureau number 4,864, and 2,511 filed by it are now pending settlement; 16,000 of such claims of colored soldiers are now on file in the Auditor's office awaiting settlement, and 5,000 certificates in settlement of claims are now temporarily suspended in the same office. The number of claims of colored sailors and their heirs on file in the Fourth Auditor's office is not definitely known, but it is probably proportionally large. And in addition to these now pending it is believed that there are at least twenty-five thousand claims outstanding for which no applications have as yet been made. Much, therefore, must yet be done to complete the business of paying bounty to the soldiers. It is believed that the system now in operation will accomplish it as honestly and economically as any that can be devised. It is not possible by any machinery to furnish absolute security to both claimants and the Government against fraud. The inventions of cupidity are almost infinite, and when no other scheme is successful the last resort of baffled dishonesty is to turn upon the Bureau agent, with false charges in the public prints, for the purpose of getting him discharged and removed."

In summing up the expenditures of the Bureau since its organization, General HOWARD remarks:

"When the Bureau was established, it was believed that the abandoned lands and other captured Confederate States property which came under charge of the Bureau, by the terms of the law creating it, would furnish a sufficient revenue for its support. Therefore no appropriations were made by Congress to defray its expenses until July, 1866, after the greater portion of the abandoned property had been restored to its former owners. The money secured before and since the organization of this Bureau from rent of lands, sale of crops, school taxes and tuition, and sale of Confederate States property, and from all miscellaneous sources, was collected together and called the refugees' and freedmen's fund and the school fund, and has amounted to $1,995,245 40. The total expenditures of the Bureau from Jan. 1, 1866, to Aug. 31, 1869, have been $11,849,022 16. In addition to this cash expenditure the subsistence and medical supplies and Quartermaster's stores issued to refugees and freedmen prior to July 1, 1866, were furnished by the Commissary, Medical and Quartermaster's Departments, and accounted for in the current expenses of those Departments. They were not charged to, nor paid for, by this Bureau. They amounted to $8,290,778 72 in original cost, but a large portion of these stores being damaged and condemned as unfit for issue to troops, their real value to the Government was probably less than $1,000,000. Adding their original cost to the amount expended from appropriations, and other sources, the total expenses of the bureau from its organization to Aug. 31, 1869, have been $12,979,816 92, and deducting $60,000 transferred to the Agricultural Department, and $300,000 set apart as a special relief fund for all classes of destitute people in the Southern States, in accordance with the joint resolution of Congress, approved March 30, 1867, the real cost of the bureau has been $12,619,816 92. The balance remaining on hand will be entirely devoted to the support of the bounty and educational division, and the one hospital remaining in this District.

In conclusion, General HOWARD says that the payment of bounties must be continued through the Bureau or some other agency until all shall have had a reasonable time to present their claims. Of the continuation of the educational work he says:

"The educational work should not only be continued, but greatly extended. If the State Governments are not prepared nor willing to provide for the education of all classes, as I hope they soon will do, I recommend that the General Government take the matter in hand. The safety of the Republic is the supreme law. There can be no safety but in a permanent peace where ignorance reigns. The law of self-preservation will justify the national Legislature in establishing, through the Bureau of Education, or some other agency a general system of free schools, and furnishing to all children of a suitable age such instruction in the rudiments of learning as may be necessary to fit them to discharge intelligently the duties of free American citizens.

THE COMING MESSAGE.

The President, in conversation to-day with a gentleman who called upon him, spoke of his message, and said its general scope had been marked out, but he had as yet done nothing in the way of details; that it would be very brief, not more than two or three columns of an ordinary newspaper; that he should confine himself to statements of facts and such recommendations as were deemed necessary, without enlarging upon arguments; and finally that it would be held open to the last moment for such finish as might be necessary, and that it would go to Congress in writing. This is therefore the only abstract of the document that will be furnished in advance of its delivery.

NEW MINISTER TO ECUADOR.

Hon. E. RUMSEY WING, of Kentucky, was today appointed Minister to Ecuador vice Judge EMERY declined. Mr. WING was the Republican candidate for Secretary of State in the last election contest in Kentucky.

TREASURY STATEMENT.

The Treasury books at 3 o'clock this P. M. showed the following exhibit: coin in the treasury, $74,555,805 14; currency, $13,658,820 26. Amount outstanding: gold certificates, $25,740,-860. The bonds purchased since the 1st of November, amounted to $5,000,000, subject to action of Congress, and $1,000,000 for the Sinking Fund. The average premium on the five millions of gold sold since the 1st inst., was 21 per cent.

SENATOR GRIMES.

Senator GRIMES writes to a friend here that his health has not improved during his European trip. His second paralytic shock was not so severe as the first, but he was very much enfeebled by it. He was preparing at last accounts for a long trip on the Mediterranean.

THE MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH.

The Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church is still in an unfinished condition. The edifice, even in its incomplete state, is an ornament to the city. The indebtedness of the building is about $60,000, and a still further sum will be required to place a spire on it and furnish it with a chime of bells. With a view of paying the debt and completing the structure a committee of the representative ladies of the Church, with Mrs. President GRANT at their head, has been organized. These ladies are engaging to paying the debt before the close of the year, and appeal to the leading Methodists of the country for assistance.

GOVERNMENT MONEY.

By a provision of the law the sealing of all the Government money is done at the Treasury Department after it is received from the Bank Note Company. An idea may be obtained of the necessity of the system of checks introduced by the Secretary in the Printing Bureau of the Department by the statement that $12,000,000, or about 3,000,000 sheets of fractional currency of the new issue, have been sealed in the Printing Bureau without the loss of a single sheet.

AMOS KENDALL'S WILL.

The will of the late AMOS KENDALL was admitted to probate to-day. It is dated May, 1868. After bequeathing to a grandson $10,000, and his lands in Arkansas, he makes bequests to several of the children, and directs that his personal property be divided between his four daughters, and gives the executors full power to dispose of his real estate, which is worth $200,000, to be divided among his heirs.

Anniversary of the Historical Society.

The New-York Historical Society celebrated their sixty-fifth anniversary last evening at their hall in Second-avenue. The venerable Dr. DEWITT presided over the large and cultivated audience that was in attendance despite the unfavorable night. Rev. Dr. MONGAN being introduced as the orator of the occasion, delivered a finished and philosophic address on "Conservatism in its Relation to Progress." An abstract of the production could hardly do justice to the speaker's analysis of the subject, the broad views he expressed and the many fine similes he used for illustration. His aim was to present the claims of a sound and rational conservatism as the guide of human action. The definition of the term, Conservatism, he said was the "preservation of truth." Its office was to gather truth from every quarter and mould it in the right shape, that it may become available for mankind in the present. The speaker compared the principle to a sound Judge who searched the cause before him with a severe scrutiny to find the truth and nothing more.

Dr. MONGAN, at the close of his address, was warmly applauded, and the society voted him their thanks and requested a copy of his address for publication.

Rev. Dr. ADAMS followed with a few humorous remarks, and the meeting adjourned.

AN OWNER OF TWO DOLLARS WANTED.

The person who wrote to the City Editor of the NEW-YORK TIMES, under a street and the initial "N," signing "A Member," inclosing $2, and begging to have last evening's address before the Historical Society reported, will please call upon our cashier, who will promptly refund the bribe.—EDS. TIMES.

Masquerade at the Central Park Garden.

The Persian Coterie gave a masquerade ball at the Central Park Garden last evening. The evening's entertainment began with a grand march at 11 o'clock, in which some hundred couples took part. Turk and African, shepherd and brigand, African and Yankee, Spanish cavalier and Scotch lassie joined hands in perfect friendship, and mirth and pleasure, fun and frolic were rulers of the evening's festivities. The dancing was carried far into the small hours of the morning, and the whole thing in spite of the rainy evening, went off to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. O'REILEY's band furnished the music for the occasion.

A Storm.

A heavy storm last night interrupted telegraphic communication with the West, delaying the receipt of dispatches in this City.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Programme of the Opening Ceremonies and Festivities—The Khedive to do the Hospitable in the Absence of the Sultan.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—As the Sultan has finally decided not to be present at the opening of M. DE LESSEPS' great work, the Viceroy will be able to exercise his hospitality in his own way, and will receive the credit of the undertaking. France will be represented by the Empress, who, in her steam yacht L'Aigle, will lead the way at the grand opening procession. Austria will be represented by her Emperor; Prussia by the Prince of PRUSSIA; Italy by Prince AMEDEUS, and a host of smaller nations and tribes will have representatives to swell the pageant. The first great gathering will take place at Port Said to-day. On the 17th there will be a grand ball at Ismalia. On the 18th there will be a great gathering of tribes at Ismalia, and a grand entertainment will be given, one feature of which will be the evolutions on horseback by Arabs. On the 19th the grand procession will start for Suez, when the canal will be formally opened. On the 20th the leading feature of the day's proceedings will be the erection of a monument to WATHEIN, who first propounded the idea of establishing the route to India see the Isthmus of Suez. This graceful acknowledgement of the services of an Englishman will show that no ill will is borne to England, although she has not rendered any assistance to M. DE LESSEPS.

The Opening Festivities—Reception of the Distinguished Guests—Dedication of a Church and a Mosque.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 16.—The festivities preliminary to the inauguration of the Suez Canal commenced at Port Said yesterday. The Emperor of Austria landed at noon, and was received by the Khedive with great ceremony and a magnificent military and civic display. The houses were decorated, arches were raised over the principal streets, hundreds of flags were flying, and salutes were exchanged between the fleet and the shore. At night the town and harbor were ablaze with fireworks and illuminations. The streets were as bright as day, all the houses being covered with lighted torches. The rigging of the men-of-war and the shipping in the harbor were hung with lanterns of every color, and showers of rockets were rising and falling. The Khedive gave a grand ball on board of his yacht, which was a superb affair. It was attended by the Emperor FRANCIS JOSEPH and all the distinguished guests now assembled at Port Said. The water was alive with boats hastening to the viceregal yacht. The ball lasted until an early hour in the morning.

To-day the Empress EUGENIE arrived, and was received by the Viceroy and the Austrian Emperor, and landed amid the thundering of the cannon and the acclamations of the multitudes which lined the shore. Among the events to-day was the dedication of a Christian church and of a Mohammedan mosque. Priests and ministers of all creeds were invited to be present on both occasions. The British men-of-war Royal Oak and Prince Consort went ashore on Sunday in the harbor. They got afloat with much difficulty on Monday evening. A flotilla of about fifty vessels, none of them drawing more than fifteen feet of water, will sail through the canal, bearing the Viceroy of Egypt, the Empress of the French and the Emperor of Austria, with all the invited guests. The weather is most favorable.

FRANCE AND PRUSSIA.

Reception of the Prussian Minister by the Emperor—The Emperor to be Present at the Elections.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The Emperor gave audience to Baron WERTHER, the newly-appointed Ambassador from Prussia, at Compiègne yesterday. Much good feeling was manifested. M. WERTHER, in presenting his credentials, assured the Emperor that the Prussian Government desired to preserve the present amicable relations with France. NAPOLEON replied warmly and at considerable length, concluding by saying that he much wished the development of a good understanding between Prussia and the German Confederation on the one side, and France on the other.

It is reported that the Emperor will leave Compiègne for Paris before the elections commence, and will remain in the city until they have terminated. The Radical Party condemn the manifesto of the Opposition Deputies for its want of courage.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

Another Letter from the Bishop of Orleans—The Infallibility of the Pope—The Status of Protestants.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Bishop DUPANLOUP has published a letter, addressed to the clergy of his diocese, deprecating the idea that the present is a favorable opportunity for claiming the infallibility of the Pope. He blames such journals as L'Univers and La Civilta Cattolica for their inconsiderate haste in discussing so delicate a question in anticipation of the deliberations of the Council.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Pope has written a letter to Archbishop MANNING, in which it is stated that although Protestants are excluded from the Ecumenical Council, facilities will be offered outside for making explanations.

SPAIN.

Abdication of Isabella Again Asserted—Spain a Republic Under the Name of a Monarchy—The Republican Prisoners.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The Journal des Débats asserts that Queen ISABELLA has definitively abdicated the throne of Spain. Le Temps says: "Everything is impossible in Spain now—a Republic, because the Republicans are insufficient; a monarchy, because no party is strong enough to appoint a King. Unless a coup d'état, or a victorious revolution occurs, Spain will probably remain provisionally an irregular republic under the name of monarchy."

MADRID, Nov. 15.—The disposal of the Republican prisoners taken during the late insurrection is under consideration. The Government is inclined to clemency, but at the same time will be careful not to endanger the future peace of the country by a mistaken leniency. It is stated that the prisoners will be allowed to choose between joining the Spanish army in Cuba or transportation to the Philippine Islands, there to await the result of the legal proceedings against them.

GREAT BRITAIN.

New Arrangement for the Removal of Mr. Peabody's Remains—A Royal Visitor at Windsor.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—According to a new arrangement the Government will dispatch Her Majesty's ship Monarch from Portsmouth, on Friday, the 26th inst., with the remains of the late GEORGE PEABODY. The Monarch will remain at Spithead for a few days until she is joined by the American vessels from the Mediterranean Squadron, when they will sail for America in company. It is now the most likely that several French war ships will also join the funeral fleet.

The King of the Belgians is expected here on a visit to the Queen at Windsor.

CUBA.

The Volunteers Draw Lots for Service—Sailing of a Steamer.

HAVANA, Nov. 16.—The battalions of volunteers stationed in the vicinity of Havana yesterday drew lots for the purpose of deciding which battalion should go first to the Vuelta Abajo region to relieve the present garrison of Regulars, in order to allow the latter to go to the seat of war. The lot fell to the Second Battalion, which will immediately leave for Vuelta Abajo. The steamship Roanoke sailed yesterday for New-Orleans.

An Amnesty to Political Offenders—The Great-Mill Rioters.

FLORENCE, Nov. 16.—An amnesty has been granted to political offenders. It extends to all who took part in the late grist-mill riots.

THE RED RIVER DIFFICULTY.

The Winnipeg Insurrection—A Territorial Government Established by the Insurgents—A War Imminent.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 7.—The latest intelligence regarding the Winnepeg war represents that Governor McDOUGALL is now encamped in Dakota Territory. His family will return to Canada, but the Governor and his staff will await events at Fort Garry, where it is said there is a party in his favor, consisting of the employes of the Hudson Bay Company and some Scotch and English settlers. Meanwhile the insurgents have established a provisional government. They demand a Territorial Government, after the manner of American Territorial Governments, with a Legislature chosen by the people; a Homestead act and a fund for school purposes and internal improvements. There is a rumor that Governor McDOUGALL will apply to the Canadian Government for troops to put down the insurrection, and to Washington for permission to move the troops through the Northwestern States.

Another Account—The Insurgents Five Hundred Strong—Indignation in Canada.

TORONTO, Nov. 16.—A special dispatch from St. Paul to the Globe, respecting the expulsion of Governor McDOUGALL and party from Red River, causes much excitement and indignation. The dispatch says Mr. McDOUGALL had advanced two miles beyond the frontier, and stopped at the Hudson's Bay Company post, sending Mr. PROVENCHER forward to parley with the insurgents, who were 500 strong. Mr. PROVENCHER was made prisoner and Mr. McDOUGALL beleaguered in the fort. No resistance was attempted, and on the 2d of November the Governor was escorted across the line, and is now encamped near Pembina in Dakota Territory. No violence was offered. The insurgents were French. They have organized a provisional government. It is reported that Mr. McDOUGALL has applied to the Ottawa authorities for troops. His family will return to Canada.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Additional letters from Pembina, dated Nov. 3 and 4, received at St. Paul, give additional particulars of the Red River rebellion. It seems that Governor McDOUGALL remained over night in the second Hudson Bay stockade, about two miles from the United States border. In the morning he was notified by 200 rebels to leave British territory by 9 o'clock, which he declined to do. At 9 o'clock the rebels marched into the stockade, and the Governor and his party marching out in haste, betook themselves to United States territory. The rebels are determined, and the inaccessibility of the country, the near approach of Winter and other obstacles, render doubtful the success of military operations. The rebellion is a temporary success, and further developments are awaited. The cause of the uprising is opposition to being annexed to the Canadian Confederation under the new Dominion, and a determination on the part of the people of the British Red River Settlement that they shall be allowed to remain independent of the British Colony, and subject only to the Government of England. The affair will probably result in war and bloodshed before it is ended.

CANADA.

Suicide of an Official—Father McMahon and his Failure—The Newfoundland Election.

COBOURG, Ontario, Nov. 16.—About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon HENRY EASTON, Collector of Customs for Cobourg, during a temporary fit of insanity, shot himself with a rifle. The ball passed through his heart, causing instant death.

KINGSTON, Ontario, Nov. 16.—Father McMAHON's denunciation of the treatment he alleges he received while a prisoner here, has excited much indignation. His statements are declared to be untrue, and a general regret is expressed at his liberation.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 16.—Intelligence concerning the Newfoundland election, although the returns are incomplete, indicates that the anti-Confederates have secured a majority.

A CALAMITY IN MILWAUKEE.

The Gaiety Theatre Burned During a Performance—Two Persons Burned to Death—Twenty Others Injured—Narrow Escape of the Audience from Entire Destruction.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 16.—During a fencing scene at the Gaiety Theatre last night, one of the rapiers struck a kerosene lamp which exploded, setting fire to the scenery. The flames communicated to the auditorium, and before all in the building had time to escape the premises were enveloped in flames. A number of persons were saved by jumping from the second story windows. Several lives were lost. Two bodies have been recovered from the ruins burned beyond recognition. One of the bodies was identified by a memorandum book as a printer boy, WILLIE BURWEN. Fifteen or twenty persons were badly burned. It is thought the bodies of others are still in the rubbish.

SECOND DISPATCH.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 16.—The Gaiety Theatre, on Main-street, was burned at a late hour last night. Two of the audience were burned to death, WILLIE BURWEN, employed in the Daily News office, and a young man named BROWN, clerk for Messrs. KUMMEL & KEMPF. Several others were more or less burned by the kerosene explosion.

Other Fires—Cotton Factory Burned in Philadelphia—Planing Mill Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—A large cotton factory on Spruce street, near Schuylkill, was burned last night. The loss is estimated at $80,000. The building was occupied by ALEXANDER BULLOUGH, HAGUE & CO., BRIERLY & CO., and DALTON & JOHNSON, manufacturers of cotton goods.

LEWISTON, Me., Nov. 16.—The large steam planing mill of PRINCE & DENSMORE, near the Maine Central Railroad Station, was burned this morning. The loss is about $7,000; insured for $3,000. The flames extended to two dwellings occupied by several families, which were also consumed.

A Financial Hurry in Boston—Hartford and Erie.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—There is continued excitement in Hartford and Erie stock and bonds, and to-day transactions on the street have been very heavy, the stock selling down to 19¾ and the bonds to 60¾. Parties who borrowed money on the stock and bonds have been notified for additional collateral, but reply that they cannot put up any more margins, but that the officers of the Company will give the Company's note, six or twelve months at eight per cent, if acceptable to the lender. Some have done this, while others have thrown their collaterals on the market, getting whatever they could realize from their sales.

THE CATSKILL EXPLOSION.

The First Reports Exaggerated—No Lives Lost—The Damages About $15,000.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Nov. 16.—The boiler explosion here yesterday was not so serious in its results as at first reported. There were only three badly injured. Mrs. GEORGE BRANDOW was burnt about the head by falling debris, and one leg is so badly injured that it will have to be amputated. Her sister, Mrs. FULVEN, had her collar bone broken; she will recover. FRANK CARTHY, the engineer, was scalded and slightly burned about the wrists, but will recover. SPOHRS & COBEA'S paper mill, where the explosion occurred, is damaged to the amount of $10,000; insured for $12,100. VAN SCHOENBURGH'S ice house adjoining is damaged to the amount of $2,000. Mrs. BRANDOW lies in a critical condition.

HUDSON, N. Y., Nov. 16.—In the boiler explosion at Catskill Village yesterday no lives were lost. The damage to property amounts to about $15,000, and falls chiefly on SPOHRS & COBEA, of the paper mill, HIRAM VAN SCHOENBURGH, whose ice houses took fire, and EDWARD CARGILL, whose dwelling house was shattered. The boiler was thrown a distance of three hundred feet, over the tops of the ice houses, and lodged in the creek. It was nearly new.

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT.

Ratification in Alabama—The Tennessee Lower House.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 16.—The Alabama Legislature has ratified the Fifteenth Amendment to the National Constitution. The vote in the Senate was—yeas 24, nays none; in the House—yeas 69, nays 16.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 16.—

THE NEW DOMINION.

Sir Francis Hincks in the Commons—How he got his Seat—His Aim, the Premiership—Growing Strong—Opposition to the Government in Ontario—A Singular Question of Jurisdiction.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MONTREAL, Friday, Nov. 12, 1869.

Sir FRANCIS HINCKS has secured his coveted seat in the House of Commons, but his victory is not one to be proud of. If he is not a hardened politician he must have regretted his return to Canada. When the announcement was first made that he was again to take an active part in Canadian politics, the newspapers of both parties east and west raised the cry of opposition. Bitter memories of the past, when Sir FRANCIS was a power in Canada, were revived; and many warm friends of the Premier advised him not to take into the Cabinet one who they had reason to fear would prove a serious disturbing element. But Sir FRANCIS was sworn in as Finance Minister, and then some of the more subservient of the Government newspapers backed down and accepted the new Knight, much against their will. Other conservative papers, and these include some of the most vigorous and best-supported in the country, are still stubborn; and there can be no doubt that the reconstructed Cabinet will have fewer supporters in Parliament than the old one had.

HOW SIR FRANCIS GOT HIS SEAT.

One would have thought that a gentleman who had formerly been a leader of the Government, who had subsequently received from the Crown substantial recognition of his talents—a man of, undoubtedly, great ability as a financier—would have had no difficulty, on returning to the scene of his former labors and triumphs, and expressing a desire to relinter political life, in obtaining a seat. Not so with Sir FRANCIS. There was no popular feeling in his favor. It was deemed expedient that the Finance Minister should represent an Ontario constituency. Sir FRANCIS owned considerable property in North Renfrew, a county on the Upper Ottawa; he was formerly elected for that county by acclamation. The people there are peculiarly open to Government influence, being in expectation of Government support to an Ottawa canal, or a railway, to the Upper country. Sir FRANCIS was Finance Minister, and, if elected, would be well able to repay favors. The constituency is not one that the Opposition ever claimed as their own. Yet, with all these advantages on his side, Sir FRANCIS found it no easy matter to secure his election. No trouble was experienced in inducing Mr. RANKIN, who held the seat at the time of Sir FRANCIS' appearance, to resign in favor of the Finance Minister. But no sooner was that done than a formidable opponent appeared in the person of a Mr. MURRAY, a leading resident Roman Catholic, and a Conservative. The regular Opposition also brought out a candidate, a Mr. FINDLAY. Had both of these gentlemen remained in the field, Sir FRANCIS would have been beaten beyond a doubt. Mr. MURRAY, however, after holding two or three meetings, and expressing strong opposition to Sir FRANCIS, though professing to support the Government, surprised his friends by resigning, and declaring his intention to work for the Finance Minister's election. This somersault had an ugly look, and disgusted many of the usual Government supporters. Mr. MURRAY made no attempt to conceal the "consideration" he had received. Mr. GUVER, the representative of the same constituency in the local Legislature, and a well-meaning, easy-going sort of a man, was prevailed upon to resign his seat in favor of Mr. MURRAY, who was to get the Government support in his candidature. The field was thus left clear for HINCKS and FINDLAY for the Commons. Respecting the canvass I do not speak on mere hearsay authority. From persons on the spot, in whose statements implicit confidence may be placed, I have the information that the most unscrupulous means were employed to return Sir FRANCIS. Government agents were at work all over the constituency; money flowed freely; votes were bought up with little attempt at concealment, particularly on the second day of polling. Sir FRANCIS himself, before the poll closed, went round from door to door literally begging for votes, and he was not sparing of his promises of good things for the constituency when he got into power. Notwithstanding all this his majority was only a small one. My informant, who is a resident of the county, and a supporter of HINCKS, assured me that had the fight been a fair one, Sir FRANCIS would have been beaten. This unusual opposition to a stable man—unusual for that constituency, at least—may, I think, be traced to two sources: The growing unpopularity of the Government in Ontario, of which I will have more to say further on, and the deep-seated repugnance to Sir FRANCIS among the Conservatives. This repugnance is a matter of old standing, acquired twenty years ago when Sir FRANCIS was a leading member of the Reform Party, and based on acts of which the present generation of young Canadians know very little and care less.

THE NEXT PREMIER OF THE DOMINION.

Why did Sir FRANCIS go to all this trouble and humiliation merely to get a subordinate position under one who formerly led the Opposition against him, and characterized him as being "steeped to the lips in corruption?" That is the question most people are asking, and the solution many arrive at is that he is playing a deeper game than what appears on the surface. Sir JOHN A. is rapidly uniting himself for the Premiership. His unfortunate social habits interfere seriously with the performance of his official duties. His ambition is to attain to the Governor-Generalship, which office it is generally understood will have a change of occupants in a couple of years. But if he fails to get the Chief Justiceship of the Supreme Court, which is soon to be established, will he at his disposal—an office for which his legal talents eminently fit him. Sir JOHN once out of politics, Sir FRANCIS would of course come in for the Premiership. Time alone will show whether or not this is really what he is aiming at, but a good many people think it is, and dread or rejoice at it according to their opinions of his ability and political integrity. Sir FRANCIS is desirious to have his name connected with some great public work. He is credited with having considerable influence with English capitalists, and the advocates of a Canadian Pacific Railway expect great things from him.

POLITICAL FEELING IN ONTARIO.

In the old ante-confederation days, when Ontario went under the name of Upper Canada, it always gave a majority for the Liberals or Reformers, and the Conservatives were kept in power only by the votes of Lower Canadians. The coalition of 1864, that brought about confederation, changed all this. Party lines were for a time obliterated, and even to this day they are not very clearly defined, though gradually becoming more distinct. When Mr. GEO. BROWN left the coalition, previous to the general election of 1867, the majority of his party followed him; the minority that clung to the coalition, together with the united vote of the Conservatives, gave, for the first time a sweeping majority from Ontario for Sir JOHN A.'s Government. Since that time the Government has virtually ceased to be a coalition, so far as Ontario is concerned, though it still keeps up the appearance. The three gentlemen who represented the Reform Party are all gone—BLAIN, dead; HOWLAND, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and McDOUGALL, of the Red River Territory—leaving not a single Reformer from Ontario in the Cabinet. Sir FRANCIS was claimed by some as a representative of the Reform element, but the election has shown the absurdity of such a claim. The Ontario people don't like such a state of affairs. The old party spirit is returning with all its former force, and the Reformers are longing for another opportunity to give expression to their opinions by their votes. I wrote to a great extent from personal knowledge, having recently returned from a visit to the principal portions of the Province, during which I had good opportunities of learning the real feeling of the people on political matters. I found an intense feeling of dissatisfaction with the Government among a large class of the people, and I have not the slightest doubt that if an election was to come off now the Opposition would return to the Commons fully as large a majority as any at Ottawa days. In the other Provinces it is different. With a few exceptions Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER, with the clergy at his back, can command the votes of the Lower Canadian French, and even among the English, regret to say, there is very little public opinion. In the Maritime Provinces we have such staunch old Liberals as HOWE and TILLEY still in the Government. The Opposition there is pretty strong, but it is not of a kind to amalgamate with that from Ontario. It is composed entirely of the old anti-confederate party, which, though it has abandoned the repeal cry, is still too much embittered against everything Canadian to unite with any party; beside their company would not be acceptable to the union-loving and superlatively-loyal Statesmen of the West. This state of things constitutes the chief safety of the Government. If its composition is of a heterogeneous character, that of the Opposition, taking the Dominion as a whole, is more so. The next general election may perhaps bring about a united Opposition, but at present it is too divided to accomplish anything.

A QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

A question has been raised in the Ontario Legislature, now in session, which affects the standing of all the local Legislatures. The Confederation Act provides clearly enough that the House of Commons shall have all the privileges and immunities of the British Commons, but nothing was said about the local Houses. Hence they are on the same footing as the Legislative Assemblies were prior to confederation. The privileges of these Assemblies, it seems, were more assumed than real. A case in point has been raised in the course of the discussion on this question. An Australian was placed in confinement by order of the Speaker of the House of Assembly for some breach of privilege. He sued the Speaker for damages, but judgment was given against him in the Australian Courts. He appealed to the Privy Council in England, and the Law Officers of the Crown decided that the Speaker had no authority to arrest any member, and he (the Speaker) was compelled to pay heavy damages. The local Legislatures, under the Confederation act, are on precisely the same footing. The Premier of Ontario, Mr. JOHN SANDFIELD MACDONALD, perceived this, and at the last session of the Legislature got an act passed "to define the privileges, immunities and powers of the Legislative Assembly." But according to the act of confederation the Dominion Minister of Justice has the power to disallow within one year after its passage, any act, good, bad or indifferent, of the local Legislature. This power was, no doubt, intended only to prevent the enactment of unconstitutional laws, and to preserve the harmony of the whole structure. But it actually gives the Minister of Justice the right to disallow any act of the local Legislatures, and thus makes him in reality supreme. In the exercise of this authority the Minister of Justice, Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, disallowed the act of the Ontario Legislature above referred to, having first submitted it to the English Crown law officers, who sustained his objections, and decided that the act was inconsistent with the act of confederation. This decision is a most humiliating one for the local Legislatures. It reduces them to the level of municipal councils, and, in fact, in some respects, they have not even the same privileges that were enjoyed by a municipal body. They cannot compel order nor attendance upon committees; in short, as SANDFIELD MACDONALD himself puts it, they are "more feeble than a Justice of the Peace, who has a right to punish for contempt committed at his Petty Sessions." And the worst of it is there is no remedy for this state of things short of the British Parliament. It has just been settled that the Legislatures can confer the required powers upon itself; there is nothing in the Constitution giving the Commons the power to do so; the only remedy is an amendment to the Constitution, and that can only be obtained from the British Parliament. Such seems to be the only inference that can be drawn from the correspondence on the subject, just published between the leaders of the Dominion and Ontario Governments, and the decision of the English Crown law officers. Another point worthy of notice in this matter is the fact that Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD submitted the act to the English law officers. It does not appear that he was bound to do so, but did it, no doubt, in order to strengthen his own position. One of the duties of the proposed Supreme Court would be to decide as to the constitutionality of all acts of the local Legislatures. H.

PAWNEE S CONVICTED.

Four Indians Convicted of Murder—Two of them Escape but One Between for his Blanket.

From the St. Joseph (Mo.) Herald, Nov. 13.

The trial of the Pawnee Indians, Yellow Sun, Little Wolf, Horse Driver and Blue Hawk, charged with the murder of SPENCER MCBURT, was completed in the United States District Court at Omaha, on Tuesday. At 10 o'clock the jury, after a deliberation of five hours in the jury room, brought in the following verdict:

"Guilty in manner and form, as charged in the indictment."

The prisoners were brought into Court to listen to the verdict and, although evidently very deeply interested in the decision, there was no outward demonstration of emotion. When made acquainted with the nature of the verdict, they all manifested a stoical indifference, and immediately started on their return to the cell which they had vacated but a few moments before.

Just as they reached the outside of the Court House, on the way to the cell, in charge of the Marshal, his deputies and Sheriff HOWE, Horse Driver and Blue Hawk sprang from the officers, leaped the fence of the jail yard with a single bound, and sided by the intense darkness, made their escape. Little Wolf then snapped his revolver at one of the retreating Indians, but the weapon missed fire, and the pursuit was of no avail.

About an hour afterward a knock was heard at the rear door of the jail, and, on its being opened, Horse Driver walked in, and to signification that he wanted his blanket, which article having slipped from his shoulders as he jumped over the fence. He was immediately secured, and taken to his old quarters in the cell. He strenuously resisted the attempt to force him to the cell, and evidently believed that he would be permitted to take his blanket and go. When asked where Blue Hawk was, he motioned to the effect that he was at the distance away. He also said he had been in the house of Superintendent LANDRY, but that was probably an untruth. In his simplicity the Indian, it is presumed, really thought that he would not be molested again.

Officers were sent out in every direction on horseback, in pursuit of Blue Hawk, and it is hardly possible that he can escape.

Colonel CHASE has signified his intention to make an arrest of judgment, with a view of securing a new trial. Whether or not he will succeed, future events will demonstrate.

The popular feeling, there can be no doubt, fully indorses the verdict of the jury. It was not expected, however, that all the defendants would be convicted. Even the attorneys for the prosecution had no such hope.

Street Cars on a New Principle—The Pneumatic Propelling Company.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Nov. 12.

There are many who have believed that because but little was said in the newspapers or elsewhere of the progress made by the Pneumatic Propelling Company, in the construction of an engine and tanks that would answer every requisite purpose, therefore the project had fallen through. We are gratified, however, to state that such is not the fact, and that the prediction of the Picayune at the time the first trial was made by WAILEY, the proprietor, is soon to be verified. After numerous failures in constructing air tanks sufficiently light, and yet sufficiently strong, Mr. WAILEY has revested the premium. After great effort, and the last cast of his cylinder made, stood easily a pressure of 207 pounds to the square inch. The cylinder is made of layers of thick brown paper, with a gum lining, and has iron heads. More of the same character are now being constructed at the Picayune Foundry. We ascertained, a few days since, the model of the engine to be used on the cars, and which is the result of years of thought and hard work on the part of Mr. WAILEY. It is, without doubt, one of the most beautiful and perfect pieces of machinery ever made, and is destined—so we are informed by the talented inventor—to work a radical change in the method of the application of steam, as well as air, for purposes of propulsion.

Every obstacle seems now to have been removed, and we may confidently expect that at no distant day our street cars will be propelled by air instead of mule power.

Banking Capital Needed in the South.

From the Atlanta (Ga.) Intelligencer, Nov. 11.

Before the war it required a banking capital of $200,000,000 to remove the crops of the South. According to the Augusta Chronicle & Sentinel, the present banking capital of the South "is not much over $10,000,000." How immense the disparity! We wonder that cotton and rice, and sugar and tobacco, staple productions of the South, this year putting up an aggregate of $400,000,000, are subject to such influences as "Rings" on Wall-street exercise over them—keeping prices down by withholding the means to transport them to market. The South must have more banking capital. If the national banks will not, we must furnish it, else must capital abroad and at home from capitalists who only want to know that such investments will be safe and profitable to induce it.

A JOCUS DETECTIVE.

Mr. Arrest and Escape on New-Orleans—Curious Revelations.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Nov. 13.

The public were apprised of the arrest last Sunday morning, on board of the steamer Great Republic, of the notorious Colonel J. H. ALEXANDER, who has been obtaining large sums of money in various places by pretending himself off as a Government agent, and who it is believed is really possessed of many important secrets of powerful Rings formed for the purpose of defrauding the United States revenue. We have just learned that he escaped last night from the custody of a Deputy United States Marshal.

It seems that previous to ALEXANDER's arrival in the city Mr. MAX DIEKENSPIEL made an affidavit before United States Commissioner WARREN charging him with receiving from him as a compromise $600 of an alleged violation of the Revenue laws. A warrant for his arrest was at once issued and placed in the hands of Deputy Marshal W. F. BLOAN, who made the arrest soon as the Great Republic landed, which was at 5 o'clock Sunday morning.

The prisoner was carried before the Commissioner on Monday for a hearing, and granted until Thursday (to-day) to find bonds—to be, however, under the charge of the Deputy Marshal, who was with his prisoner at the City Hotel, on Sunday afternoon. It seems, ALEXANDER, while enjoying the freedom of the hotel, was arrested by Special Officer CUNNINGHAM, of the Metropolitan Police, on a telegram from Jackson, Miss., but Deputy Marshal LOAN effected his release. While Deputy LOAN and Superintendent CARR were conversing on the subject, ALEXANDER slipped away. But was rearrested on Baronne-street, in about an hour, by LOAN, who retained him in custody until 7:30 o'clock last evening, when he again escaped and has not since been found.

Deputy Marshal LOAN states that the prisoner had been in low spirits, weeping and evincing the most poignant grief, and they entered their room together preparatory to taking a walk. While the officer was changing his apparel ALEXANDER made some excuse to go out a moment, and leaving the room incontinently absconded.

About five minutes after the prisoner's departure a servant carried up to LOAN two letters, one addressed to ALEXANDER and one to himself; the latter had been picked up in the hall, and upon the envelope were a few lines saying that his (ALEXANDER's) body would be found in the Mississippi River, at the foot of Canal-street, and the letter itself contained instructions as to the disposition of his body and effects, which were to be sent to his residence on Fifth-avenue, New-York, where he is said to have lived in elegant style.

ALEXANDER is about 45 years of age, five feet eight inches high, has a ruddy complexion, head partly bald, black hair, heavy black mustache, and a Jewish cast of countenance. He is a German, speaks broken English, and has a fine address. It is believed those parties who were largely interested in defrauding the revenue, and who fear damaging disclosures, have spirited the prisoner off. He stated to the Marshal that he was here on a $25,000 transaction. One of his favorite dodges was to pass himself off as a brother-in-law of Vice-President COLFAX.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Causes and Prevention of Fires—Operations of the Department—A Letter from President Shaler.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I was exceedingly gratified on perusing the article in your issue of the 9th inst., headed "How fires are caused and how their danger may be lessened." No better service can be rendered by our leading papers than to occasionally remind the public of the serious consequences likely to result from the careless use of combustible materials as well as fire. And if in doing so, it is found necessary to make suggestions to the Fire Department, I am quite sure the Commissioners will receive them in the proper spirit, even if circumstances prevent their adoption. Among the thousand and one causes of fire in our City, the use of inferior kerosene oil is probably the most frequent, and seems likely to remain so until another equally economical but less dangerous article is furnished for the use of the masses, or a law enacted and enforced which shall hedge it around with such safeguards as will secure immunity from accidents. But I apprehend no law can be enforced which will make careless persons careful. The only way, therefore, to reduce the chances of fires from the use of inflammable oils, is to convince the dealer that "honesty is the best policy," and the most profitable one for him to pursue, by inflicting severe penalties for exposing for sale an article that vaporizes below 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The Commissioners have done and are now doing everything in their power to prevent the sale of oils which do not come up to the standard required by law. But the law is found to be defective in its operation, and it is hoped that the incoming Legislature, upon having their attention called to it, will make such amendments as will render the use of inflammable oils comparatively safe.

Gas burners, unprotected by globes or shades, in close proximity to window curtains, are another fruitful source of fires in our dwellings; and it is not uncommon to see a side burner in workshops, and even in large warehouses, where the surroundings are light woodwork, without a guard or protection of any kind. While we know that we are powerless to secure proper caution on the part of the public against accidents of the character referred to, we recognize it as our duty to furnish the means for promptly attacking fires and thereby preventing their extension. The Commissioners are continually devising means by which fires may be reached at the earliest possible moment. The use of a portable fire extinguisher, carried by one man, for catching fires in their inception, was long since adopted; and it is now under contemplation to multiply them throughout the City, wherever convenient and desirable locations can be found. The introduction of a new and perfect fire alarm telegraph, with alarm boxes located not more than two or three blocks apart, and accessible to citizens as well as policemen and firemen on street patrol, thereby securing the earliest possible notice of a fire, is quite certain to contribute greatly to the successful working of the Department. The establishment of a complete system of street patrols by firemen, having for its object the discovery and extinguishment of fires, was one of the earliest means adopted to reduce the losses by fire.

You say in the article referred to:

"Our means of fire-extinguishment are certainly not commensurate with the needs of the City so long as extensive conflagrations are frequent, and the annual resulting loss is millions of dollars. Our present engines are serviceable and should be retained, but they should be supplemented by a flying corps that can reach the reported fires almost simultaneously with the alarm; and to accomplish this the fire stations must be multiplied. Apparatus sufficiently light to be easily portable should be stationed over the City at such short intervals as to be able to instantly meet every emergency; even if it were nothing more than a short hose, manageable by one man, it would in many cases be amply sufficient, and have lower floor fires put out before the engines could arrive.

The Fire Commissioners have so admirably managed the public service in their charge that we are justified in calling attention to the defects yet apparent in their system. A vast improvement is perceptible since the time when the tap of the fire bell was merely the signal for a jubilee of ruffianism, but perfection has not yet been reached, and the Commissioners are sensible enough not to make the claim.

In this you are exactly correct. And the means proposed of locating light portable fire extinguishers at public offices, hotels, police stations, &c., in connection with the street patrols of firemen, and an increased number of telegraph alarm stations, will, I think, prove sufficient for any and all emergencies. In fact, under existing circumstances, these are the only means available. The location of light hose carriages to be drawn by hand, in sufficient numbers to meet the requirements of the whole City, would not only be attended with a very large outlay of money in the beginning, but would also entail upon us a continuous burden of expenditures for days, repairs, house rents and salaries of at least three men for each station. Moreover, in many parts of the City during business hours, the water pressure at the hydrants is so slight as to be of no practical use in extinguishing fires, thus making the use of engines imperative.

The heavy steam engines formerly in use in the Department have been replaced by lighter ones, and any apparent lack of promptness in reaching the scene of conflagration is attributable to the delay in communicating the alarm in

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS—Nov. 16.
Before Judge Bedford.

There were fourteen cases on the calendar, of which only a few were tried.

John Becker pleaded guilty to an attempt at burglary, and was sentenced to six months in State Prison.

Francis Maguire, aged 16, pleaded guilty to having stolen a gold watch from Mr. Jacob Lorillard, which a friend of his had received. He was sent to the Catholic Reformatory Institution.

William Campbell was sent to the Catholic Reformatory, for having received goods under false pretences from a grocer who was imposed upon by his good character was testified to by several persons.

GRAND LARCENY.

Thomas Lacy, Thomas Lacy, and William Owen, jointly with Samuel Stevens, on a first bill had been found for grand larceny, was arraigned yesterday, singly, on the charge, and severally pleaded guilty to the trial. The evidence adduced was to the effect that on the 11th September last, the prisoners, with one Mike Frost, in a furnished room, which was rented to him at $3 a week, and that it belonged to the landlady, Mrs. Frost, for a book from the library, at the same time pointing out the place where it was. They were a quantity of valuable books were found in the room, and told him to take whatever book he wished, leaving the room open for the purpose. The prisoners, on being questioned by Officer Smith, at P. M. when they immediately disappeared, carrying with them their night keys, and without having paid for the room for the last three days afterward it was found that there had been days afterward it was found grenadine dress, black cloth sacque, an overcoat velvet, and other articles, all valued at $150. Suspicion rested on the prisoner, who was shortly afterward arrested in Philadelphia, and on being taken back to the city found the prisoner guilty, and the Court sentenced him to five years' imprisonment, and the extreme penalty of the law.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Baron WERTHER, the new Prussian Minister to France, was received by the Emperor at Compiègne yesterday, when expressions of a mutual desire for the maintenance of the present amicable relations were indulged in. The Emperor spoke particularly of the development of a good understanding between Prussia and the German Confederation on the one side and France on the other.

A new arrangement has been made about the removal of the late GENERAL PRIM's remains to the United States. The British man-of-war Monarch, with the remains on board, will be joined at Spithead by the United States vessels assigned to that duty, and in company they will cross the Atlantic. It is likely that several French vessels will join the funeral squadron.

The initial festivities connected with the opening of the Suez Canal began on the 16th at Port Said. Eastern and European customs were strangely blended, the decorations and displays exhibiting the peculiarities of the East prominently. The absence of the Sultan will permit the Viceroy of Egypt to extend the hospitalities of the occasion to his guests in his own way. The procession of vessels through the canal will be led by L'Aigle, the steam yacht of the French Empress, on the 19th, when the canal will be formally opened.

The Bishop of Orleans has published a letter to his clergy deprecating the inopportune claim now made for the infallibility of the Pope, and accusing the ultra journals of inconsiderate haste in the matter. The Pope, it is said, writes to Archbishop MANNING that opportunities for explanation will be granted to Protestants outside the Ecumenical Council.

An amnesty has been granted to all political offenders in Italy.

The revolt in Dalmatia is reported ended and the country quiet.

The Journal des Débats of Paris, says Ex-QUEEN ISABELLA has definitively abdicated the Spanish throne. Le Temps of Paris says that unless a victorious revolution or a coup d'état occurs, Spain will remain an irregular republic under the name of monarchy. The fate of the Republican prisoners is under consideration, and it is thought that they will be given the choice of joining the army in Cuba or banishment.

GENERAL.

The will of the late AMOS KENDALL was admitted to probate yesterday in Washington. It bequeaths $10,000 and lands in Arkansas to a grandson, his personal property to his four daughters, and empowers the executors to divide his real estate ($800,000) among his heirs.

The boiler explosion at Caldwill Village on Monday morning was not so serious a calamity as at first reported. No lives have thus far been lost, although the condition of Mrs. BRINDOW, who sustained injuries in the head and may have to submit to amputation of one leg, is very critical. The boiler was thrown three hundred feet, falling in a creek. The damage done amounts to about $15,000.

During an entertainment in the Gaiety Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., on Monday night, the scenery was set on fire by a kerosene lamp, which was shattered by the caprice of one of the actors in a fleeting scene. The flames spread so rapidly that before the audience could escape the whole interior was in flames, and many were compelled to jump from the windows of the second story. The bodies of two persons have been discovered in the ruins, and it is supposed that others are still under the debris. Fifteen or twenty persons were badly injured.

The latest advices from the Winnepeg region represent Governor McDOUGALL encamped in Dakota, where he will await the operations of a party at Fort Garry, said to be favorable to him. The insurgents have established a provisional Government, similar to the Montanese Government in the United States, with a Legislative Council, a Judiciary, Sheriffs, Marshals, and a Court of Queen's Bench. The Council has voted a fund for school purposes. The Government has offered to recognize the Hudson's Bay Company's claim to land, if the Company will first recognize the sovereignty of the United States. It is said that Mr. McDOUGALL will move his forces through one Government Station.

General SCHENCK's condition, according to a dispatch from Washington, had improved yesterday.

Colonel WILLIAM SMITH, Superintendent of several railroads, died in Dayton, Ohio, yesterday.

Advices from Newfoundland indicate that the recent elections in that Island have resulted adversely to the advocates of the confederation of that Province with the Dominion of Canada.

A cotton factory in Spruce-street, near Schuylkill, Philadelphia, was burned on Monday night. The loss is estimated at $80,000.

The Tennessee House of Representatives yesterday ratified the Fifteenth Amendment. The Amendment was also ratified yesterday by both branches of the Alabama Legislature.

A Kingston, Ontario, dispatch says that Father McMAHON's allegations of ill treatment while a prisoner there, provoke indignation and demonstrations of regret that he has been released.

FRENCH & DEBEVOISE'S planing mill, at Lewiston, Me., was destroyed by fire yesterday morning, together with several dwellings near the mill. The loss of the mill owners is $7,000.

EDWARD HEALEY, a grocer in South Boston, dashed out his wife's brains with an ax on Monday night. He was committed for trial yesterday.

A snow storm began at Washington yesterday morning at 11 o'clock which reached Philadelphia about 1:30 P. M.

LOCAL.

The third annual Convention of the American Institute of Architects is now in session at the rooms of the American Chapter, No. 265 Broadway. The preliminary meeting was held at 8 P. M. yesterday. The Convention will close its proceedings at 6 P. M. to-day. The closing address will be delivered by E. L. GODKIN, Esq., of this City.

Captain DUPONOIS, the artist of the Vanderbilt Bronze, gave an entertainment to the members of the New-York Press at the Astor House, last evening, which was numerously attended. HORACE GREELEY presided, and speeches were made by the Chairman, by Captain DUPONOIS, Mr. HALSEY, of Cincinnati, Mr. ROOSEVELT, Mr. DUGANNE and others.

WENDELL PHILLIPS delivered a lecture last evening at Steinway Hall on "The Question of the Future," during which he reviewed at considerable length the effects of the ballot-box, temperance, and the right of woman to vote.

A commission composed of Treasury officials arrived in this City on Wednesday last, for the purpose of making an investigation into the new national currency stamp in the possession of the American and National Bank Note Companies. The investigation was conducted in a very secret manner at the American Bank Note Company's office, but was finished on Saturday in a manner highly satisfactory to the Commission and to the Company. The investigation at the National Bank Note Company's office has not yet terminated.

It was well understood at the Custom House yesterday that the Collector has determined to nominate Mr. DANIEL H. TOMPKINS as Deputy Collector in the place of S. T. BLATCHFORD, who has virtually abandoned the position.

The Sixty-fifth Anniversary of the New-York Historical Society was celebrated last evening at their Hall. Rev. Dr. MORGAN delivered the address on the occasion. His subject was "Conservatism in its Relation to Progress."

JOHN MITCHELL lectured last night at the Cooper Institute for the benefit of Mrs. LARKIN, whose husband was one of the Fenians hanged at Manchester. The subject was "Henry Grattan and Smith O'Brien."

The Drawback Frauds.

The promise of the new Administration to ferret out, check and punish fraud in high places, is in a fair way of fulfillment. On Friday morning the examination in the case of the drawback frauds, which occurred under the last Administration, is to be resumed before Commissioner OSBORN. Enough progress has already been made, however, in the investigations of District-Attorney PHELPS-PONT and Collector GRINNELL, to show that these frauds, as we have already said, amount to nearly a million dollars, and implicate many persons, clerks, brokers, and revenue officers.

As usual with plots so flab spun and adroit as this, the clue to its unraveling was given by disappointed accomplices. The frauds began, apparently, with one SUMNER, three or four years ago. His bogus claims of drawback were forwarded by dishonest Custom House clerks, and out of the proceeds he ran a course of dissipation soon closed by his death. Next on the scene appear the CALDWELLS, in 1866, who are said to have realized a quarter of a million out of their operations. Their accomplice was S. T. BLATCHFORD, a clerk in the Drawback Department in 1866, and a Deputy Collector in 1867 and 1868. To them succeeded WHIPSTER, WELLWOOD and others; and as BLATCHFORD had secured an appointment to another position, his successor, THERMOTT, in like manner became the ally of the successors of the CALDWELLS in the fraud. Such was the chain of iniquitious proceedings; and connected with it, and more or less implicated by the testimony already published in our columns, are such names as S. W. GREEN, MULLIGAN, F. A. HOWARD, J. A. MOTT, H. A. DICKINSON, ALEX. GRANT, Jr., together with FERRIS, KORN, S. F. RANDALL and others as already recorded.

Of course many of the guilty parties have already fled with their ill-gotten gains. RANDALL is in Cuba, it is said, with $60,000; FERRIS, the Washington claim agent, who helped the fraud at that end of the line, is in Europe, probably, with $240,000—more than his fair share; MOTT, a Government clerk in Washington, charged with complicity with WHIPSTER, is in California; WELLWOOD, bookkeeper for the CALDWELLS, turned informer and then fled, and is now in Canada; while BLATCHFORD, who lately took "French leave" at the Custom House, has not yet been apprehended. The wonder is that frauds so enormous, so audacious, extending over so long a period, and involving so many persons, could be so successfully prosecuted.

However, a brief explanation of the nature and operation of the drawback claim will somewhat diminish the surprise naturally connected with the present disclosures. A law of Congress, designed to help our trade, provides that, if articles manufactured, and on which a revenue tax has been paid, shall afterward be exported, the tax collected on them in the first instance shall be refunded to the exporter. This is the "drawback." The necessary certificates of export pass through a series of desks at the Custom House, as usual, to identify the articles, and, when each has affixed his name and initials, proving that the articles that were put in had really paid tax, a check [illegible] Of course one hundred cents on the dollar, or even more, is a double-barreled question. In addition, only one of the Maple Sugar gums can be pointed at the line of the ship's course. With the monitor, the entire fold can be swept by all her guns and all can fire in a direct line with her keel.

The question is therefore raised, why, in view of such facts, British constructors do not adopt the American, or monitor turret system, in place of the fixed battery. The only conceivable reason is that they have been misled by erroneous accounts of the monitors, published during the war, when it was the interest of the enemies of the Union, both on this side of the ocean and the other, to lessen their prestige. In addition to this, some American writers, ignorant of the real facts, have disseminated almost equally erroneous opinions. One of the main objections to the monitor so assigned, was that "the joint between the turret and the deck cannot be made secure"—an assumption on theory wholly contrary to the historic fact.

We are perfectly content that this misapprehension should subsist. Our only purpose is to show that the monitor has not yet been "superseded" by the latest and most elaborate of the fixed casemate ships, and, at this rate, is not likely to be.

The Right Spirit.

The bitterness of spirit which stern conflict engendered is dying out among the Southern Republicans. In Alabama, as in Arkansas, the Governor has promulgated opinions which indicate the rapid growth of generous sentiment, and the prevalence of a disposition to obliterate as quickly as possible all that remains of proscription, whether in Federal or local legislation. Governor CLAYTON, in Arkansas, has informally but explicitly identified himself with the genuine peacemakers,—those who, having secured the essentials of an enduring reconstruction, are now ready to discard disabilities as an auxiliary of loyalty, and to cultivate cordial relations with all who accept the new order of things in good faith. More formally, Governor SMITH, in his message to the Alabama Legislature, has inculcated the same general ideas. His tone, the telegraph tells us, is "very conservative." He deprecates appeals for military interference in State affairs, and declares that the demands hitherto urged on that subject have been without justification. The people of the State he represents as peaceful, and its general progress as satisfactory.

Now, Governors CLAYTON and SMITH are "Radicals" of the first water. Their devotion to the Republican Party is second only to their devotion to the Union. They command the confidence of the great body of Republicans in their respective States, and their record entitles them to it. In giving utterance to liberal and conciliatory opinions, then, they cannot be suspected of lukewarmness in the cause with which they both are identified, nor can they be supposed to have diverged very widely from the main current of local Republican opinion. Time, and a better understanding of the grounds of difference, and the influence of returning prosperity, and the sense of common material interest, and the effect of a wise exercise of national authority under GRANT's Administration, have doubtless all contributed to the gratifying change.

The Reign of the Tire-Warmerites.

It is hard work to break down any system which politicians have found handy for purposes of corruption. We have not only to fight against the corruptors, but the corrupted, and the still more numerous class which is quite willing to be corrupted if any one will make it worth their while. But if the public can once be brought to a proper appreciation of the evils produced by a vicious institution, they may be relied upon to sweep it out of the way. We have long endeavored to secure a reform of the Judiciary in this State; and to superficial observers it might have seemed that our labor was lost. But the very heavy vote—it may turn out to be a majority—for the Judiciary Article recently submitted to the people, shows that the public mind is always open to the reception of truth. For this reason we gladly welcome any new effort to arouse the whole country to the importance of remodelling the civil service. We may have to toil on for some time yet, but "constant dropping wears away a stone," and we shall certainly win in the end. It is impossible that people can go on reading Mr. JENCKES' statements and arguments, or articles like those of Mr. ADAMS in the North American Review, and of Mr. PARTON in the new number of the Atlantic Monthly, or the essay of Mr. G. W. CURTIS at the Social Science Congress, without being stirred to rid the country of one of the greatest scandals associated with it, at home or abroad.

The civil service is a dishonest blunder from beginning to end. When we have a good man in any post we very rarely allow him to remain there long. We either transfer him to some appointment for which he is not fitted, and in which his special abilities are utterly thrown away, or we get rid of him altogether, and put a worthless, incompetent, unprincipled office-seeker in his place. People go to members of Congress and demand appointments as a matter of right. The same plan is sometimes tried in England. A voter goes to a member of Parliament, and says: "I was on your Committee at the last election, and, as you know, I had a good deal to do with your success. Now I want to get my son into a Government office." But the member cannot help such a man, if he would. The Prime Minister himself could not put any one into a public office, although he might give him an appointment outside of it. All he can say to the applicant is: "If your son possesses the qualifications exacted by the particular office you wish him to enter, he will be able to pass the competitive examination, and that is the only door open to you, me, or anybody else." The son of a lord must pass just the same examination as the son of a shoemaker. People who wish their children to enter the civil service, have them trained at school especially for it, and if afterward they fail to pass the examination, they know that it is [illegible] Congress budgets the head of a Department until he gets places for as many of his friends as he is anxious to oblige.

Of course we lose all the good men and get all the bad by this process. You cannot induce first-class men to go begging round among members of Congress for an appointment. The persons who are ready for that kind of work are the very ones whom the Government ought not to employ at any price. The Government, to begin with, does not pay enough to compensate able men, who have no private means, for devoting the whole of their time to the service of the country. The late Chief Justice of the Supreme Court gave up a lucrative practice at the Maryland Bar in order to accept the post offered him by the Government. His habits were moderate, but he died in a destitute condition. "When I was in Washington last Winter," says Mr. PARTON, "the daughters of the late Chief Justice were earning a scanty, precarious livelihood by copying documents in one of the public offices at eight cents per hundred words." Another member of the Supreme Court was last Winter paying the whole of his salary for the board of himself and his wife. It took all the ex-Attorney-General's salary to pay his rent. We all know what happens when men of an inferior type are placed in this predicament. They eke out their salaries by taking bribes, by plundering the public, by defrauding the Government—and they persuade themselves that they are justified in so doing because the Government is trying to cheat them by taking their time without paying for it.

The perpetual scramble for place is demoralizing the public mind, and impeding the business of Government in every direction. It is all very well to recommend people to go out to the wilderness and work. Why should they toil for bread when by scheming and intriguing they may obtain an "office?" Of course a large proportion must fail. But they never give up hope. They would rather dog the heels of a member of Congress, or haunt the precincts of the White House, for a year together, than do a day's hard labor. Once let it be understood that a proof of competency will be required from every man before he can obtain office, and all this dirty work will come to an end—at least so far as the civil service is concerned. For this reason we recommend, as we have done before, the institution of a system of competitive examinations. What can be fairer? The best man will win in the larger number of cases. A higher standard of honor would prevail in the new service, and that alone would go far toward extinguishing corruption. In England the plan has answered to perfection, and it has been extended to India with the very best results. Once, valuable appointments in the Indian civil service were in the gift of a few families. Now the poorest boy in Great Britain is eligible to compete for them—and what is more, the poorest boys often get them. It is not an untried experiment which we urge upon the public attention. It has produced an efficient civil service in every country where it has been adopted. Why should we hesitate to ascertain the qualifications of our public servants before engaging them, and afterward to remunerate them at a fair rate? It is the only way of getting the work of the nation well and honestly done.

The Irish Land System and its Proposed Reform.

While the large number of speeches and essays which have been uttered and written in England upon the Irish land question do not suggest any very clear method of its settlement, they do prove that no time is to be lost in giving this one more installment of justice to Ireland. The grievances which are complained of are, however, acknowledged, which is one difficulty disposed of. The objects in view are to procure some certainty of occupation for the tenant, where at present there is none, and to do away with that long catalogue of evils which have followed in the train of absenteeism and an oppressive system of land tenure. And there is a pretty general agreement that these reforms, however arrived at, must be sufficient to satisfy all but the most violent advocate of a repeal of the union.

There can be no doubt that nothing less than radical changes in the relations of landlord and tenant in Ireland will answer the purpose of quieting disaffection. There is a sort of natural justice in the demand that the small farmer shall be undisturbed by the owner of his land, so long as he fulfills the duties of a tenant. And the possibility that, for holding some political opinion adverse to that of this owner, or because improvements had increased the value of the farm, he may be evicted, is a gross and palpable wrong which must cease. The fact, moreover, that the landowner, some titled man, perhaps, never visits his property, but intrusts its management to the hands of an unwatched agent, is favorable to all kinds of tyranny and corruption. These all need remedy, but the question is what? Mr. CAIRD has attempted to supply it by a proposed measure, which contains several new features. One of these is an entire reversal of the practice of eviction. At present the course of the agent is, in a very large proportion of cases, most arbitrary and cruel. It is simply an order to vacate the house or hut at once, and forcible expulsion in case of refusal to comply with all speed. It is proposed to substitute for this barbarity the giving of formal notice, not merely verbal but by service, and by publication in the Gazette and widely circulated papers. By this method fair time would be secured to the tenant in which to make his arrangements, and the public as well as the absentee proprietor might learn something of what is going on upon the latter's estate. Mr. CAIRD suggests twenty-one-year leases as the principal basis of tenure. This is open to great objections, coupled as it is with the reversion to the owner of all improvements at the end of that time. While ostensibly but an effort to secure the interests of the landlord, this plan proposes the imposition of a condition which, though it does not be[illegible] some apparently reasonable until the end of the term, is a GOVERNING influence against improvements throughout the duration. Another proposition is scarcely less reprehensible—that of compelling owners who wish to evict to give a five years' lease before doing so. To that is only prolonging the wretchedness of the tenant, and postponing for a time his, perhaps, inevitable ruin.

Fixity of tenure is the remedy suggested by some other writers on the subject; that is, that the tenant shall remain in possession so long as he pleases and pays his rent. If, however, at any time the owner wish to resume possession, he shall buy the tenant out, upon the valuation of some local authority, based upon the cost of improvements and damages for disturbance. But neither of these plans appears to meet the case. What is wanted is that the Irish tenant-farmers be given facilities for acquiring land in their own right. The desire for such acquisition is both natural and just. It is as strongly felt in England as in Ireland. The United States has, by its homestead laws, made provision to satisfy it, and agrarian outrages are therefore unknown. Not that the proprietors of large estates are to be despoiled of their possessions; but if those of them who are merely absent pensioners, and whose neglect is responsible for much of the evils complained of, are called upon to sell to the Government, which, in its turn, may sell on easy terms to the occupiers, they, least of all, need feel no surprise. One thing is certain—the same bold and far-seeing policy which was applied to the Irish Church question must also be resorted to in that of the land. It is not only Irish prosperity which must be promoted, but pacification which must be striven for.

There can be no doubt that the honors paid to the remains of Mr. PEABODY are in part intended as a compliment to this country. Her Majesty's steamer Monarch will bring the body to these shores, in company with some vessels from the French fleet, and a detachment of American ships from the Mediterranean Squadron. The differences of opinion which have existed between these nations ought not to render us insensible to the homage now paid to us, or to the good feeling which prompts so many tributes of affection and admiration for a man who was almost universally regarded as a representative American, in his charity of heart, his sympathy for the poor, and his sincere desire to render the world happier and better than he found it.

At this time of the year the human constitution is put to a pretty severe trial in this country. It is not the weather which is our enemy so much as the means we employ for "dodging" the weather. The heater, although a good thing in moderation, is very often turned into an effective arrangement for making young people "delicate," for rendering the old feeble and infirm, and for giving everybody severe colds. People eat and sleep in an atmosphere artificially heated to between 80° and 90°. The degree of heat, and the constant changes to which it exposes us, are not the only evils. The air is vitiated by the heater, and when the temperature is raised to an extreme point, as it is in many of our stores and dwelling houses, it is impossible for any human lungs to breathe it without sustaining injury. To bring up children in such an atmosphere is simply to weaken them for life. Some people have so demoralized their vital system as to be scarcely able to live a yard away from the heater. There is a well-known dry goods store in this City where the thermometer would nearly always register 78° of heat. Is it any wonder that people complain of headaches after being in there half an hour or so?

The streets of this City have seldom been in a dirtier condition than at present—and that is saying a good deal. Broadway, which, according to contract, is to be swept every night, has not been thoroughly swept for a month; and as for the other "main thoroughfares," which the contract requires shall be cleaned once a day, they are never cleaned at all. The present street cleaning contractor is JOHN L. BROWN, and the City pays him $600,000 per annum, or about $2,000 for every day in which the weather will permit him to do work under the contract. How is he earning his money? Who audits his bills? Will the Street-cleaning Commission do the public the favor to look into the matter? But first let them take a ride around the City and look at the streets.

No doubt the reception given to the Prussian ambassador by the Emperor NAPOLEON, at Compiègne, conflicts, at first sight, with the reported alliance of France, Russia and Austria. But NAPOLEON is in the habit of following Commodore VANDERBILT's principle—tell no one your plans until you have accomplished them. He is said to have assured Baron WERTHER that he much wished the development of a good understanding between Prussia, the German Confederation, and France. Very likely; but he may have peculiar ideas about the best way of arriving at such an understanding. There is at least one person in Prussia who is not likely to be thrown off his guard by fine words—Count BISMARCK, and he has hitherto proved himself to be fully a match for NAPOLEON.

In his speech, delivered in Albany immediately after election, Governor HOFFMAN said:

"We propose to give to the people of the State of New-York, all over, the right of self-government. We propose to abolish all laws that infringe upon the rights of localities—to secure to them the right to govern themselves. We propose to make the State of New-York, and the Government in all branches, thoroughly Democratic."

Governor HOFFMAN, as is well known, is simply a creature of the Tammany Ring in this City. They made him all he is, and he has not yet shown that he dares do anything contrary to their wishes. One of the chiefs, if not the chief, of this Ring is WM. M. TWEED, and the kind of "self-government" that prevails where they have sway is well illustrated in the following, which we take from a morning paper, and which furnishes the best commentary that can be made on the Governor's speech:

"A delegation from the Seventh Ward yesterday presented the Hon. WILLIAM M. TWEED a petition, signed by 3,000 taxpayers of the ward, humbly begging for the nomination of Mr. RICHARD WALSH to a seat in the Board of Aldermen. It is to be hoped that Mr. TWEED may respect the wishes of the people in this instance."

To make a canal across the Isthmus of Suez, and so connect the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, is one thing; to render the Red Sea easy of navigation is another. At present the most careful seamanship cannot securely guard vessels against accidents. The sea is full of coral reefs and shoals. Only the other day we reported the loss of a steamer larger than the fleets in this perilous highway. When the road becomes crowded we may look for a much larger proportion of accidents. If, as seems so likely, trading between East and Aden, and during the whole of that time the Captains of the "Peninsular and Oriental" steamers—the ones which ply between England and India—so correctly view of the dangers, not never when off his station. And yet with all this vigilance three of these steamers have been lost within a very few years. It is proposed, we believe, that the fleet thus should be honored and buoyed at the expense of England and France. It would be a noble work, and it is impossible to doubt that some hundreds of lives would be saved by it. To the ordinary passenger the discomforts of a Red Sea passage—the fearful heat, the intolerable tension on the air, the gloom and depression produced by all the surrounding circumstances—are quite enough to face without the prospect of shipwreck and death being added.

By the time it comes to be considered that the boy or man who carries a pistol is still a City as this, carries also the heart of a coward within his breast, it is possible that the custom will die out. It is all nonsense for the ordinary run of people to pretend that a pistol in their pocket is necessary for their protection. No doubt many persons have duties to perform which render it almost necessary that they should go armed, but every boy now thinks that it is the "proper thing" to have a "Derringer" in his waistcoat, when the rod is really what would do him good. It is half a pity that Jem MACE cannot teach these twopenny swashbucklers that it is possible to defend oneself against any fair odds without using the weapon of the midnight assassin. We are not the advocates of prize fighting, but the pugilist, we his worst, is a less heinous offender than that miserable assassin JACKSON, Deputy Sheriff, who shot an old and defenseless man while his back was turned, and who now vainly hopes that his crime will be forgotten by the Press and the public. Every man who carries a pistol, except for well defined objects of self-defense, is actually a coward and potentially a murderer. Consequently, the law ought to take his pistol from him, and give him a taste of the prison cell into the bargain.

Without accepting literally the Chicago dispatch purporting to represent the quandary in which the new Canadian Governor of the Hudson's Bay Territory finds himself, there seems to be a sufficient basis of fact to indicate one prolific source of trouble which the Dominion Government cannot hope altogether to avert. The Indians and half-breeds were content with the sway of the great fur monopoly; its policy suited their ends; its operations comported with their convenience and profit. By introducing organized authority of another character, and inaugurating a policy which appropriates the hunting grounds for purposes of settlement, the Dominion appears to array itself against the Indian and half-breed population, who are not likely to surrender their vast domain without a struggle. In the nature of things, they will scour or later give trouble to the Canadian officials, who, isolated and helpless, have not a very pleasant prospect before them. The only succor they can receive from Canada must proceed through United States territory or not at all; and even if permission be granted by the Washington Administration, it is quite certain that any force which the Dominion can send will be utterly unequal to the emergency. Of course, finally, civilization and government will prove more than a match for the Indians. But we look for a series of difficulties akin to those with which the settlers upon our own frontier are painfully familiar,—with this difference, that the Canadian Government will be less able to cope with the danger, because separated from it by a wilderness of rock, river and forest, extending many hundreds of miles, without facilities of any description. Governor McDOUGALL has before him a time of severe trial; and those who go to join and succor him, whether soldiers or settlers, will have a hard road to travel.

The courageous directness of Mr. BENNETT gives him already the advantage over Mr. ASHBURY in the matter of the yacht challenge. Where there is a will there is a way in such controversies, and we do not well see how the latter gentleman can refuse the offer of the owner of the Dauntless, which is a very simple one, and may also be called a sublime one. It is not so terrible, perhaps, as the challenge of the old gentleman who once invited his adversary to sit with him on a kilderkin of gunpowder, each armed with his lucifer match; but that rush over the Atlantic in the time of the equinox, when "the lion, March, is on the sea," is confoundedly startling to stagger any yachtsman of the old school. It may seem too continental for the British imagination, which would probably find a home course around the Channel Islands far more agreeable.

At the women's right meeting in the Brooklyn Academy of Music some very lofty and applauded arguments were used. Mrs. STOWE said, in her own persuasive way, that when a woman with the suffrage wanted her husband to vote as she wished, she would put on the table all the dainties she knew he liked. There were cheers at this—coming no doubt from some gentlemen who liked the idea. The same speaker also suggested the innovation of ornamenting the polling booths with flower vases, another very attractive idea; better certainly than the notion of those late Brooklyn gog boxes we have heard of. Another lady laughed at the women who appealed to all their husbands said, calling them "weaker of concession." This was very much applauded, and the males will of course begin henceforward to take it to heart for the benefit of all concerned.

Railroad accidents, caused by the carelessness of switchmen, have been so common that they fail to attract more than a momentary attention from the public. One of these men misplaces a switch, a train is thrown from the track, somebody is killed, the Coroner summons the culprit, and there the matter ends. Nobody ever heard of a conviction in these cases, and the result is that men are encouraged to neglect their duties at the peril of human life. The force of reasoning has just been repeated in the case of the Harlem Railroad accident of the 11th inst.—the switchman and the company both being held to liability. Who believes that they will be indicted and punished?

It is gratifying to note the evidence of prosperity among the people of South Carolina. During the past year they have paid over two and a half million dollars into the Internal Revenue Department, besides a million dollars State taxes, while their debt has been so far reduced that it amounts to but one-sixth of that of North Carolina. This cheering exhibit is due mainly to the abundance of the rice and cotton crops of the past year, the value of which will reach, if it does not exceed, twenty-five million dollars. It is not to be forgotten, however, that something is due to the protection which has characterized the legislation of the State, for without this the multitudes of [illegible] would have been something to support the financial position of the Government. In this case reconstruction is justified by its fruits.

The prospect for the early ratification of the proposed Fifteenth Amendment is encouraging. Yesterday both branches of the Alabama Legislature ratified it by large majorities, and the House of Representatives of Tennessee took similar action, the vote being 57 yeas and 12 nays. There has been some doubt respecting the action of Tennessee, and it is gratifying to be thus assured that the pledges given before the State election are to be fulfilled. We published in September a statement showing that at that time nineteen States had ratified the Amendment. Since that date Vermont and Virginia have recorded their votes in its favor. These, with Alabama, make twenty-two States which have indorsed the Amendment; six more are required to make the ratification complete. It is safe to bound upon Iowa, Minnesota, Mississippi, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Texas as sure votes in favor of the Amendment, thus completely ratifying it, with one State to spare.

The disabled veterans of the war are to be benefited by the proceeds of Miss OLIVE LOGAN'S lecture on "Girls," at Steinway Hall, this evening. Apart from the interest attaching to the lecture itself, and the popularity enjoyed by the lecturer, the excellent purpose which is to be promoted should attract a full audience.

Theatrical.

"LONDON" AT THE FRENCH THEATRE.

The second performance of the new sensational drama of "London; or, Lights and Shadows of the Great City," was enjoyed at the French Theatre, last evening, by a numerous audience. The work, in spite of a complication of incidents, is an interesting one, and its purity of tone gives it a value distinct from recent pieces of a similar order. We shall not undertake to recount here the story of "London," upon which rests an acting play in the fullest sense of the term. The misfortunes of the principal persons figuring in it are abundant enough to enlist sympathy were they even less forcibly illustrated than they are, and comic element is sufficiently strong to relieve the darkness of a great portion of the picture. It would be to little purpose to write at length of the actors, most of whom are well known and esteemed. Mrs. CLARA JENNINGS, who embodies Miss Hawes, is recognized as a beautiful, experienced and, better than all, painstaking actress. Mr. F. C. BANGS, who personates Harold Forrester, will be remembered for his very impressive acting in "Patrie," and can be referred to in this connection as endowing the rather thankless part he takes with as much chivalry as it will bear, and with a sufficiency of it to make it a creditable and an agreeable performance. Mr. LEWIS BAKER, a comedian of genuine merit, personates Ralph Horne, an aged but not a venerable being, whose wickedness would elicit each reproval as might enable the authors to dispense with any other villains. Finally, Mr. EGINTON and Mr. PARSLOE, Jr., assume the other rôles, and contribute, the former a well-studied embodiment, and the latter a sketch of the traditional gamin with which past acquaintance with the actor has made local playgoers familiar. It is not, however, the acting of these persons that gives "London" its weightiest claim to public attention. The scenery of the drama, concerning the excellence of which lively anticipation had been excited, is its most magnetic quality, and deserves all the praise that from the outset has been demanded for it. It was painted in London, and expressly for this play. The scenes are not meaningless combinations of canvas and bright colors, but truthful, substantial, and skillfully executed views of the English metropolis, all appropriate, too, to the tale the artists nightly unfold. London Bridge, with distant views of the Tower, is the opening picture. Temple Bar is next seen, and afterward reproductions of the Charing Cross Railway Depot, of the Old Bailey Criminal Court, and of London Docks, with a dozen other panoramic tableaux, are shown. Some of the pictures are flats, only lowered after the European fashion, which, we are happy to note, permits a constantly-recurring exhibition of soldiers' arms and carpenters' shoulders; but a few are bona fide acts of the most massive kind. The Charing Cross Railway Depot is one of the best of the latter, and has certainly never been surpassed in accuracy and effect, while the one representing the City of London docks is superior to it, and for high fidelity, deceptive power and richness of coloring, is quite unequaled. It would be a not ungrateful task, in dealing with this scenery, to trace the points of difference between the European methods of scenic art and those in use here, and to indicate improvements in do so is likely to be offered in some time hence than is afforded by the bringing out of Messrs. LESLIE and CLARKE'S play at the house now under the management of Mr. C. W. TAYLEURE. The limitations of this article, however, forbid its prosecution, and meanwhile we can but suggest a visit to "London," which, we answer for it, will have entertaining and instructive results. The work is to be repeated each evening until further advices, and also, we see, at a special Thanksgiving Day matinée.

One Historic Question.

It is has been a matter of surprise that so many of the great Midland Counties of New-York have remained for a whole generation since the introduction of railways in this State without proper facilities to trade and travel. It is gratifying to know that their wants are soon to be amply supplied. The fact is of almost if not quite equal importance to the City of New-York. These counties are among the richest and most productive in point of agriculture and dairy produce, on the State. They are grazing counties as well, and it is safe to say that the direct and greatly improved intercourse with our markets, which a railway of their own will soon secure, will add from twenty to twenty-five per cent. to the daily supplies of milk, butter, cheese, &c., now afforded by other lines of local traffic of this nature, and on the Harlem, Erie, and the New-Jersey roads now affords. Adds, therefore, from the consideration of a direct through route from the City of New-York to Lake Ontario, as Oswego and its lateral connections with Lake Erie, via Auburn, and with the St. Lawrence via Camden, in Oneida County, on the Ogdensburg Road, the New Midland Counties Railway is an enterprise of the very highest importance, as we believe it will prove one of profit, to the local and domestic interests, and comfort of those counties themselves, and to the prosperity and dignity of this City.

The New-York and Oswego Midland Railway Corporation, which has undertaken this good work, is as active as well as able scheme, and its success in point of Capital Stock paid up and skillfully applied to the building of the road, also for, such as to make the foundation and credit of the 7 P cent. Mortgage Bonds—Principal and interest made payable in Gold coin—of the most reliable character. The Bonds are on the market through the Bankers of the Company, Messrs. Gardner Greene & Co., Mr. Geyzer himself, and Messrs. A. A. Low and Delos De Wolf being the Trustees. The local subscriptions have been contributed to the amount of $4,000,000 by the counties and towns through which the line passes, in the shape of 7 P cent. Bonds, which, being made by the Legislature free of all taxation, have found ready sale without detriment at home.

A charter has been secured from New-Jersey to make the connection with this City direct, from Jersey City to Sterling, and thence through Warwick, Goshen and Middletown, in Orange County, to and through the County of Sullivan, with a side branch to Ellenville, in Ulster County, and thence through Delaware, Otsego, Chenango, Cortland, Onondaga, Cayuga, Madison, Oneida and Oswego.

The rate of carriage is strictly limited by law to 2½ cts per mile. The pamphlet and map furnished by the Bankers of the Company afford every information of the rapid progress of the street and its direction and local and through connections. In common with our neighbors of the City Press, we feel free to commend the success of the negotiation undertaken by Messrs. Greene, as well as the score of what our merchants and property holders owe to themselves, in the way of promoting this object, to say nothing of their public duties, as for the intrinsic soundness of the security.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

A Plot Against the Emperor's Life—The Ministerial Crisis—The Paris Exposition—The Mexican Ex-Emperor—Mr. Washburne's Salary.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Nov. 3.

The cable will have probably transmitted to New-York, ere this reaches you, the rumor of the discovery of a plot against the Emperor's life. When the Police get hold of anything that can be magnified into the semblance of a conspiracy, you may be sure that it loses nothing in the carriage, even though the distance be only from Compiègne to Paris. As the first account of the affair is that which has, no doubt, reached you, let me reduce it to its proper proportions by giving you the facts. In the first place, there is not the slightest evidence that there was anything of a plot in question, and I think it will be even difficult to make out that there was any design on the part of the individual arrested to harm His Majesty at all. The facts are simply these: About 9 o'clock in the evening a Zouave who was stationed as a sentry on the terrace of the gardens, detected a man stealing toward the palace under cover of the trees. He challenged him, and finding that he could not give the password, arrested him. On being questioned, he stated that his name was PHILIPPE, and that he had come from Compiègne to kill the Emperor. He allowed himself to be passively conducted to the Police Station, and, on being examined by the Inspector, his replies were found to be so incoherent that he was at once set down as insane. This impression was still further confirmed by the fact that he had neither arms nor papers of any kind on his person. On Monday he was subjected to another interrogatory by M. EMY, the Procureur Impérial, and M. SCOTTO, a Judge d'Instruction. Nothing has transpired regarding the result of this second examination, and the man still continues in prison. It is hardly to be supposed from what I have stated to you that anything can be made out of the affair to damage the political opponents of the Government. Even the "irreconcilables" would not be likely to resort to such clumsy means to accomplish their ends.

THE PARIS ELECTIONS.

We are passing through all the turmoil and excitement of another electioneering canvass, and that almost on the eve of the meeting of the Legislative Body, which takes place on the 20th of this month. In fact the second ballot, for there will unquestionably be one, will extend even beyond it. The Government is greatly blamed for this unfortunate arrangement, for nothing can be more ill-judged than to have the newly elected Deputies pass fresh from the excitement of the contest into the hall of the Legislature. It would seem almost as if it was courting a conflict. The thing, however, is fixed and cannot now be remedied. As to the candidates in the Paris circumscriptions a few details about them may be interesting to your readers. In the first circumscription only two candidates have as yet formally presented themselves, namely, M. HENRI ROCHEFORT, the editor of the Lanterne, and M. THIERS, brother of the Government Deputy and editor of the Peuple Français. ROCHEFORT is to be in town to-night to prosecute his canvass. There are two other candidates en petto—M. LAURIER, the advocate and great friend of M. GAMBETTA, and M. CANTAGREL, the socialist. The two latter have not as yet published their addresses. In the third circumscription the only candidates who have as yet put forth their professions of faith, are Dr. TONY MOILIN, the socialist, and M. DURIER, of the Siècle. These two, and M. LAVRESTREDE, of the Rappel, are all pretty much of the same stripe. There is some talk of M. BUISSON, of the Avenir National, and M. POUYER QUERTIER, the protectionist, for the same circumscription. Delegates were sent to M. LEDRU ROLLIN, in London, to offer him the nomination, but he declined taking the qualifying oath. In the fourth circumscription the candidates are M. ALLOU, formerly bâtonnier of the order of advocates, a moderate Democrat; M. ARTHUR PICARD, brother of M. BERNST PICARD; M. GLAIS-BIZOIN, the oratorical wasp of the Opposition; M. DE GASTE, an importation from Brest; M. HENRI DIDIER, formerly a representative of the people, and M. LOUIS SIMONIN, the lecturer, traveler and journalist, whose publications on the United States are imbued with the true Republican spirit. In the eighth circumscription the candidates, M. BEAURAUD ARAGO, former Commissary of the Republic at Lyons; M. HERALD, a member of the Council of State, but an earnest Liberal; M. LAVERTUJON, editor of the Gironde, one of the ablest of the Democratic organs in the south of France; M. GEYS, formerly deported to Noukavva, and M. LAGHAUD, one of the ablest advocates of France, but supported by the Government.

THE EX-EMPRESS CHARLOTTE.

I find in one of the Brussels journals some interesting details regarding the condition of the unfortunate widow of the late Emperor MAXIMILIAN. She still resides at the chateau of Tervueren, and is closely watched in the long walks that she is in the habit of taking in the park, as she has several times endeavored to deceive the vigilance of her keepers. This constant supervision annoys her greatly, and she sometimes breaks out into violent fits of passion. She passes a considerable portion of her time in the telegraph office at Tervueren, and is continually sending telegrams to the various European Sovereigns to complain of the restraint in which she is kept. These dispatches are sent off in her presence to the chief of the Brussels, and she will not quit the office until she receives the answer.

One of the most curious features of the mental condition of the unfortunate Princess is her peculiarity of refusing to sit down at table to take her meals. The officer on duty, who generally dines with her, is obliged to eat on the corner of the chimney-piece, and she herself will only eat from a dish when some one has tasted it in her presence. Her fixed idea is that people are always trying to poison her. She passes agitated nights, and it is only toward morning that she obtains a few hours peaceful sleep. But for the energy of her organization she would never be able to resist the fatigue consequent upon the feverish excitement under which she is always laboring.

MR. WASHBURNE'S SALARY.

I called upon the Minister this morning and found Mr. very much annoyed at the statements which had found their way into the New-York journals regarding an alleged application that had been made by him to the State Department for an increase of salary. The report had got into some of the Paris newspapers, which, of course, did not contribute to mend the matter. Mr. WASHBURNE authorizes me to say that he never made any application for an addition to his salary nor did he desire to do so. The amount allowed him was sufficient for all his wants. What he did apply to the Department for, and this had no doubt given rise to the rumor in question, was a small addition to the sum allowed for office rent. The increase in the amount of business transacted at the Légation, and the insufficiency of the present office accommodation, justified him in asking the Department to grant it additional space. As the Légation was at a distance from his private residence, and personally he would not benefit by it more than any of the other gentlemen connected with the Embassy, he thought it rather hard that he should be accused of trying to advance his own interests, when in reality he was consulting only the public accommodation. I think it but due to Mr. WASHBURNE that I should forward you this explanation, although I see that you have in a measure anticipated it, by a statement of your own.

MR. WASHBURNE'S FIRST RECEPTION.

On Wednesday evening the Minister gave his first reception at his new residence in the Avenue de l'Impératrice. There were no ladies present, Mrs. WASHBURNE being still indisposed. Among the principal guests on the occasion

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP ARABIA.

Captain Wotherspoon, Arabia, 2d. Engineer, James Pearson, Liverpool, Nov. 4, and Queenstown, Nov. 7, passed the Sandy Hook yesterday. Had adverse and heavy gales the entire passage, which has delayed the Cunard steamship Tripoli and the entrance to the Bay of Fundy. In Boston, it is one of the most tempestuous weathers in the middle and latter part of Oct.

MR. PEABODY.

An English Estimate of the Philanthropist's Worth.

From the London Times, Nov. 3.

The news of Mr. PEABODY'S death will be received with no common sorrow on both sides of the Atlantic. The sentiment of regret will not be a mere passing tribute of gratitude to the munificent benefactor. Mr. PEABODY, throughout the course of a long life, has been accumulating manifold titles to be lamented. He was an ardent patriot, who was loved almost as much as at home. He was a Merchant Prince, who, when the South was bowed down in the dust, stepped forward with two millions of dollars at a moment when the Government and Parliament of England were hesitating, but his charity has passed by nobody. He was a philanthropist who was thought as well of as honored. There was nothing hard or nothing narrow about Mr. PEABODY'S philanthropy. He simply did whatever good came in his way. Wherever an occasion presented itself for a generous and benevolent action, there was he found with purse in hand, eager to aid. When his adopted State of Maryland was in sore pecuniary straits he repaid it for having afforded him a home by negotiating a loan for it free of cost. When the American Department at the Great Exhibition was in danger of appearing on the day of opening a mere chaos of uncancelled goods, his contribution of £3,000 was ready to save his countrymen from even a passing mortification. When a faint hope awoke in America that survivors of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S expedition might be rescued, Mr. PEABODY'S subsidy consummated the generous enterprise of Mr. GRINNELL. His vast gifts of millions of dollars for various purposes from 1856 downward dazzled the world. It looked upon such generosity as a sort of sudden meteor. But a survey of Mr. PEABODY'S career shows that all this was but the natural growth and blossom of a life of consistent munificence.

It requires some remarkable qualities to create a gigantic fortune, but more remarkable qualities still are needed to know how to spend it. The two faculties are seldom found together. They were, however, combined in Mr. PEABODY. He was a keen and shrewd man of business, he made money energetically, and his tastes were too simple to expend it upon himself; but from an almost Puritan cause shone forth the soul of an old Greek where any purpose of public munificence could be served. He was a discoverer, and of something a good deal more precious than the chilling Arctic deserts which his money helped to explore, and which bear his name. What he has discovered is a motive for keeping hoarded wealth—the pleasure of giving it away. But his liberality may be shown to have been always guided by certain very distinct principles. England and America contributed in about equal proportions to his riches, and he acted as if he accounted himself simply a depositary and banker for both. Twenty years of American career caused him to forget that he was American citizen; yet it is permissible to suspect that his feeling of duty and loyalty to his native country was not inconsistent with a warm love and attachment to his adopted home. In any case, an anxious desire to promote the good of each of the two nations as common ground for the charity of a citizen of either is a principle of unity which explains and binds together the infinitely various objects of his generosity. He did not lay himself out for the gratitude of one or both countries by simply giving them wealth, though he knew that the best measure of his power to render the accumulation in his person of wealth derived from England and America a source of permanent benefit to each. If Mr. PEABODY had by will built almshouses or endowed charitable institutions, the gratitude would have been with no general recreation. Persons who adopt this way of employing their fortunes have seldom the interest in the advancement of their country which deserves national gratitude. They find themselves in the possession of wealth which they cannot use on themselves. They use it, therefore, for public purposes, but it is almost an accident what particular purposes they select. Mr. PEABODY'S mode of disbursing his million or millions bears scrutiny for the reason that he did not become charitable because he had become rich, but that it may almost be said, he became rich in order that he might be charitable, and charitable in a fashion to benefit his native and adopted home. That this was his single aim and desire appears as well in many other ways as particularly in his modestly delegating to strangers the choice of the objects which should receive the charity he had set apart for them. He was not actuated in this by indolence or the fear of responsibility. In America he had landmarks to guide him, and his American gifts were accordingly apportioned by himself to stated destinations. He was less clear as to the special needs of London, and he believed, as millionaires are very apt to believe, that others might have a truer discernment. It marks a high grade in the scale of charity to give up the pleasure of being charitable after one's own taste.

If there had been nothing certain about Mr. PEABODY'S gifts to this country but the manifest satisfaction which they prompted, there would be ample cause for regretting his death. But for the full measure of gratitude on account of munificence like his, not the motive alone for giving, but the manner, nor that only, but the nature of the gift, ought to bear the test of criticism. Mr. PEABODY'S London charities more than rivaled these conditions. No higher motive could exist for the distribution of an enormous fortune than the desire to link together the branches of a great race by the consciousness of being the common objects of his noble generosity. The manner of his gift—his whole life—was fit for the gifts, and his unselfish disclaimer of all power over their particular destination, enhanced the feeling of obligation. But to make a benefactor's memory dear it is also necessary that the objects of his liberality should actually benefit by it. As for this, the machinery which Mr. PEABODY employed for the application of his money was so happily constituted as to be fitted to turn it to the most advantageous account. Some benefactors have been supremely unfortunate in the uses to which their offerings have been diverted. Mr. WALKER, of Beverly notoriety, is not the first donor, and will not be the last, whose trust has been abused. But it was no mere fortunate accident which will have guaranteed the Peabody gift against becoming a perennial source of jobbery or pauperism. The donor's whole life was in evidence here—his life stamped with the character of Mr. PEABODY, and with what he had to do. Above all, he was still living to point the example. His trustees were not likely to err, but if they had been he, living in their sight, was a constant reminder that the object of his charity was not to encourage dependance, but to help those who will help themselves. A quarter of a million sterling is no trifling amount even to a city rich as London. Wealthy as a community may be, its wealth is appropriated as strictly and inflexibly as a workman's five-and-twenty shillings a week. There is seldom a margin of a hundred thousand pounds available for this or that philanthropic experiment. It is no light thing for a man who has heaped together a large estate to divest himself of it while still able to enjoy it. Age and the certainty—which is never felt as a certainty—that it is and its owner must soon part company do not render it easier. The spontaneous devotion of wealth to charitable uses is an elaborate device for keeping hold of it still, and for remaining associated with it; but the world sees little connection between such bequests and the testator. Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, indulging all pursuits in his riches while living, has made it impossible to dissociate his identity from them now that he is dead. Every fresh token of the utility of his benevolence must tend to excite affection for his memory.

AQUATICS.

Four-oared Race for the Championship of the World.

From the Pall Mall Gazette, Nov. 3.

The first of the great races between the picked men of London and Newcastle, the representative crews of the Thames and the Tyne, came off this afternoon over the champion course from Putney to Mortlake, and was witnessed by a large assemblage of spectators, although a pouring rain which set in about noon, must have kept some hundreds away. Among the various incidents which have engrossed the aquatic mind, whether annual or otherwise, none have claimed a greater amount of public attention during the last thirty years than the ever-recurring feud between the North and South country oarsmen, which had its rise in the dispute as to who could build the fastest boats, and culminated in the triumphs of the late ROBERT CHAMBERS over the Londoners on their own ground from 1836 to 1845, when HENRY KELLY again wrested the championship honors from him. Twenty-seven years ago the North and South crews first met. Then the race was on the Tyne, when the brothers CLASPER and EDWARD HAWKES were beaten on their own river by ROBERT COOMBES, ROBERT MEWELL and the DOUBLEDEES. Since that time the rival schools have met repeatedly on the Tyne, and victory has more often decided for the North countrymen than their rivals, but never till now has a second bona fide race been arranged. The event we are now recording arose out of the late contest at the Thames regatta, which, after a splendid race for two and a half miles, the South countrymen won by a few feet. A desire was immediately expressed by the Newcastle men to meet them again, and sinking all those differences which have so long militated against the success of the Lower men, a fund got together, partly at the same time of the first, and of their opponents, who on their part, have brought to London a magnificent new, and rarely have two such fours been seen contending. The following are the names and weights of the respective fours:

THE WESTERN CREW.

	st.	lb.
1. Jos Sadler, Putney	11	0
2. Henry Kelley, Fulham	10	12
3. W. Mossman, Teddington	11	7
(Stroke) Geo. Hammerton, Teddington	10	7
C. Hammerton, Jr., (coxswain)	9	8

THE TYNE CREW.

	st.	lb.
1. Jas. Taylor, Ouseburn	10	0
2. Thos. Winship, Dockwechough	10	11
3. John Martin, Newcastle	11	9
(Stroke) Jas. Renforth, Gateshead	12	11
M. Hall, (coxswain)	8	13

RESULT OF THE RACE.

The Tyne crew won by three lengths. The time as taken by chronograph was 20 minutes 43 seconds. The "return match" for a like sum will be rowed on Nov. 19 from High-level Bridge to Scotswood Suspension on the Tyne.

EARTHQUAKES.

Grave of the Late Phenomena in Germany—Account of the Shocks.

From the Pall Mall Gazette, Nov. 3.

The scene of the late earthquake in Germany extends from Gross-Gerau, between Darmstadt and Mayence, to Heunet on the north, Gladenbach and Aschaffenburg on the east, Hanagen on the west, and Heilbronn and Stuttgart on the south. The strongest shocks were felt at Gross-Gerau and at Stuttgart. At the latter place they were preceded by intense cold, and followed by a sudden increase of temperature, with thick fogs. The earthquake was also felt at Wiesbaden, at Frankfort, and at Saarbrucken, where two very powerful shocks, lasting from eight to ten seconds each, occurred last Monday at 8:40 A. M. and 11:55 P. M. A letter from Giessen, dated the 1st inst., says that on the previous evening, about 6 o'clock, a swaying motion was perceived from east to west, and the shock was so severe that people rose from their chairs, and the pen fell out of the writer's hand. Accounts from Frankfort state that the earthquake was felt there at 11:45 P. M., on Sunday, and that it lasted ten minutes. Windows rattled, various articles of furniture were moved out of their places, the ceiling of a house fell in, and many of the inhabitants were so alarmed that they came out into the streets. At Gros-Gerau, which was the central point of the earthquake, nearly 200 shocks were felt between the 20th of October, and the 3d of November, during nearly the whole of which time incessant rumblings were heard. The first severe shock occurred on the 20th, at 5 o'clock P. M., and was followed by others at 11:30 P. M., and at 1 o'clock A. M., 12:15 P. M. and 3:45 P. M., on the 21st. At 5:30 on Sunday evening there was so violent a shock that several chimneys fell, lamps and bottles rolled over, and horses broke out of their stables. All these shocks were preceded by a noise like the roll of distant musketry; they came with a wave-like motion, going sometimes from north to south, but mostly from west to east.

LECTURES.

THE QUESTION OF TO-MORROW.

Lecture by Wendell Phillips at Steinway Hall—Woman's Rights, Labor, Temperance and the Purity of the Ballot Box.

Steinway Hall, Fourteenth-street, was comfortably filled last evening on the occasion of a lecture by WENDELL PHILLIPS, who took for his subject "The Question of To-morrow." The lecturer commenced by alluding to the custom hitherto adopted of speaking only on certain subjects on the Lyceum. Time was when the Lyceum found its choice of subjects, in literature, travels, biography and science. It undertook to paint some great representative portrait symbolic of its epoch, to report the last invention or discovery, to bring to those who stayed at home the impressions of travel; but at present the Lyceum had undertaken the province of agitator, had undertaken to discuss the great civil and political questions of the day; to teach civil duty, and tear open the great questions of public interest, to which latter development he attached the most interest. He had grown to be a man, had gone through the University and been admitted to the Bar, and had studied Webster by heart before receiving his first lesson in the essential character of the Government under which he was born, and that he got in the streets. Thirty-four years ago, while in Boston, he was attracted by a noisy crowd, whom he observed dragging a man by a chord round his waist. A mob of 3,000 gentlemen in broadcloth were there assembled. The Mayor of the City entreated them to desist, beseeched the crowd of his own social companions to respect the law, but they set his authority at defiance, derisively laughed at his supplications; and though he descended lower and lower with his appeals to the mercy of the mob, they scoffed at his remarks and finally heeded them not. Mr. PHILLIPS was then fresh from the study of constitutional law, anxious for the technical rights of the individual subject; his soul kindled with constitutional indignation, although he was no Abolitionist, and being a commissioned officer, and then in company with the Colonel of his regiment, he asked the superior officer why the Mayor did not call the soldiery out and clear the streets in ten minutes. The Colonel answered, "Don't you see that the regiment is in that mob; there are the men to bear your muskets," and then for the first time it flashed through his mind that the statutes were made in the streets, and that in a critical combat, law consisted of the force of the mob; that the safety of life was in the keeping of the streets. In 1861 he saw another scene. The Anti-Slavery Society held a meeting at Tremont Temple, Boston, but it was dispersed by a mob of the city who were headed by the Mayor. The Legislature was appealed to for protection, and the Capitol was about being given as a refuge from the mob, when the Governor of Boston sent word privately to the Senate, "Don't you open your doors to the Anti-Slavery Society; I have not the means of protecting the Senate." Members from the North of the City of the law of the country was defied; it was in the hands of the masses. Time and again he stood in this City when the representatives of rowdyism and disorder were assembled; behind them stood G. W. MATSELL, Chief of Police, who was only like a spaniel before the mass. In thirty years he learned the lesson that God gave what was worked for and earned; he gave intelligence to the people, the guarantee of life, the shield of the freedom of speech. In ordinary times any vessel could float, but in weather, when the storm made ocean his heaven, it required a magnetic pilot at the helm. It was the storm that strained the ship men noted upon yesterday than in a political town, and as within the confines of society, their introduction into the Legislature would be the means of an old man's being more self-respect. Two and a half centuries ago there was no society and no wrongs; society was made every day by leaders of the present day; they differed from the works of DICKENS, THACKERAY and writers at a time when society exists. The introduction of woman into the Legislature would not be the means of dragging her down, but another element would be introduced—two each chamber brought into natural relations not and respect so as to raise each other. He did not want woman in politics because she brought an angel there, but he wanted her because she brought the elements of all that had made literature what it was, art and society what they were. He introduced the case of a Southern gentleman engaged in the late emplacentness" [laughter] whose thoughts were elevated by the advice of his little daughter, and suggested that everything be done toward properly using the ballot. He casually referred to the great conflict in the West between the Chinese and Europeans, and said that before twenty years would have elapsed they would see more men than he had. The conflict was going to be an angry one—almost doubtful. Women stand ready! Clean out all the defects in machinery; "plant the ballot box on sobriety; summon woman to your aid; reconcile labor, and then let the trigger fling out, and God defend the right."

Mr. PHILLIPS concluded his address amid loud applause.

IRISH HEROES.

John Mitchel's Lecture—A Sketch of the Public Careers of Henry Grattan and Smith O'Brien.

The large hall of the Cooper Institute was literally crammed last evening on the occasion of JOHN MITCHEL'S lecture on HENRY GRATTAN and SMITH O'BRIEN, for the benefit of the widow of LARKIN, one of the Fenians who was hanged at Manchester. The stage was occupied by many prominent Irish gentlemen and ladies, and Mayor HALL was Chairman. Mr. MITCHEL in his lecture reviewed the glorious, though unhappy, political career of HENRY GRATTAN, and dwelt with admiration upon the undaunted manner in which the patriotic statesman opposed CASTLEREAGH and the corrupt members of the Irish Parliament in the struggle preceding the Union, clearly defending the stand taken by that illustrious man during the political war waged at that time. Mr. MITCHEL pointed out the dangers his course led him into, and the moral courage and pure patriotism he displayed throughout the whole. From the Union until the time of GRATTAN'S death was laid in Westminster Abbey, Mr. MITCHEL followed his career, pointing out the many disappointments he experienced and the too brief gleam of sunshine which lit up the last few days of his life until he died in 1820. Turning to WILLIAM SMITH O'BRIEN, the leader of the young Ireland party in 1848, the lecturer spoke with fervor his views of this gentleman. Intimately acquainted with Mr. O'BRIEN, as he was, Mr. MITCHEL gave in detail the history of the man from boyhood until death with thrilling accuracy. Comparing him with HENRY GRATTAN, he said that although very much unlike in many respects, yet the characters and public lives of these men were somewhat similar. Both were Protestants, patriots and statesmen, struggling for the independence of Ireland, and both devoted their best energies to the cause. But though death came to cut short the labors of both, GRATTAN died with hope still living in his heart, while SMITH O'BRIEN'S last breath was drawn when the dark clouds of adversity were thickening over his unfortunate country, a broken-hearted man. With the assurance that better days are in store for his country, the lecturer concluded amid rapturous applause.

RICHARD O'GORMAN then moved that a vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. MITCHEL, which was carried with three cheers, which were given lustily by the audience.

JOHN MARTIN, another of the exiles of 1848, and also a Fenian sympathizer, who has but just arrived in this country from Ireland, was introduced by Mayor HALL. He was received with prolonged cheers of welcome, alluding to which pleasantly, he said that he had listened with pleasure to his old and esteemed friends's lecture. The two men, he continued, GRATTAN and O'BRIEN, I have ever looked up to as friends, and have endeavored to follow in their footsteps in my own humble way. Independence, freedom for Ireland have been the great aim and desire of my life, and their attainment, in common with Mr. MITCHEL, I have labored and longed for. But mark me in defining my position to you at this meeting, I repeat, I would not, that I have always hoped and striven for this liberty in a peaceful manner, believing it to be the best means of obtaining it. Yet will I say that if as a last resort it should become necessary to wade to freedom through a sea of blood—mind you, as a last resort—I would do it. But peacefully, if we can, let us work for it. Although this proposition did not seem to please the majority of his auditors, still they welcomed the speaker heartily. As the conclusion of his remarks, the meeting closed.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The salesroom yesterday presented quite a brisk appearance. The attendance was one of the largest obtained this season, and composed of a class of persons who will compare favorably with those of last Fall, when the real estate excitement was at its height and buyers were plenty. The great feature was the sale of Brooklyn property by Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER. The sale advertised by Messrs. MILLIKEN, WHEELER & Co. was adjourned.

To-day but one sale will be made, consisting of thirty-five acres of land, with the improvements, situated on the west side of Central Park-avenue, and on both sides of the road leading from Kingsbridge to Woodlawn Depot, Harlem Railroad, being three-quarters of a mile from Woodlawn Depot, two miles from Fordham Depot, Harlem Railroad; two miles from Riverdale Depot, Hudson River Railroad, and two miles from City of New-York at Kingsbridge, having a frontage on Central-avenue of 1,449 feet, and a frontage of 1,425 feet on both sides of the Kingsbridge road. Most of the ground is high, overlooking the surrounding country, with full view of the Harlem River, Palisades and Washington Heights. The property will be sold in three parcels. Terms of sale: Ten per cent. and auctioneers' fees on day of sale; sixty per cent. can remain on bond and mortgage one, three or five years; balance on Thursday, Dec. 16, 1869. Maps may be had at the auctioneers' office, No. 20 Pine-street.

But little property is ever offered on the day immediately preceding a holiday, and the above is the only sale announced for to-day. The coming week offers several attractions, particulars of which may be found in our advertising columns.

SALE OF THE UNITED STATES ARMORY, ARSENAL, WORKS AND GROUNDS AT HARPER'S FERRY, WEST VA., AND VICINITY.

ORDNANCE OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, Sept. 25, 1869.

In pursuance of the act approved Dec. 15, 1868, and by direction of the Secretary of War, the property of the United States at Harper's Ferry, West Va., and vicinity, will be sold by public auction, on TUESDAY, the 16th day of November, 1869, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. and continuing from day to day until all is sold.

The value of this property for manufacturing purposes is so well known to the manufacturing world as to need no further comment, but a description of the same is being prepared, and will be sent to persons who may wish it, as soon as it is printed, upon their applying by letter to the undersigned.

The property will be sold in lots. The first will include the Musket Factory, embracing a strip of land running to the western boundary, on the Potomac, the Armory power on the Shenandoah, the buildings, the walls of two large buildings are standing on this ground, and the foundations of several others; and the water wheels, with gearing, and the flumes are in almost perfect order, these are turbines, of the most approved kind, and the others are mostly cast iron with wooden buckets.

The second will be the site of the Rifle Factory and water power on the Shenandoah, the buildings upon which have been destroyed, but the canal is in good order.

The third will be the Shenandoah Ferry, with a tract of 48 acres of land on the south, and a lot on the Harper's Ferry shore opposite.

The fourth will be the perpetual right to cut and remove wood from a tract of 1,866 acres mountain land across the Shenandoah.

The fifth will be the right to dig iron ore from a tract of about 1,400 acres of land known as Friend's Ore Bank, acquired by deed from Henry Lee and others.

The remainder, consisting of houses and lots in the town, will be sold lot by lot.

The Government will convey to the purchasers, after payment of the purchase money, all the right and title to the property, which is believed to be perfect in every case.

The terms of sale, prescribed by law, are a credit of one and two years. The purchaser is required to give bond with security for the payment of the purchase money; and these terms must be complied with within ten days from the sale.

A map showing the metes and bounds of the Harper's Ferry property, will be exhibited at the time of sale.

The Government reserves the right to withdraw any or all lots offered, if the bids are not satisfactory.

A. B. DYER,
Brevet Major-General, Chief Ordnance.

NOTICE TO DELINQUENTS.

Persons who purchased lots in 1868, and have not fully paid for them, are notified that if they pay what is due before the 1st day of April, the lots will be deeded to them, otherwise they will be resold.

A. B. DYER,
Brevet Major-General, Chief Ordnance.

SUPREME COURT—COUNTY OF NEW-YORK.—EDWARD MORGAN and others against HICKSON W. A REMAINING AMOUNT OF THE

7-40 GOLD BONDS

Of the Chicago, Danville and Vincennes Railroad are offered for sale by Messrs. W. BAILEY LANG & CO., Merchants, No. 34 Cliff-st., New-York.

They are $1,600 Bonds, issued upon a railroad nearly one-half completed, traversing a country unsurpassed by any in the first essentials of a large and profitable business.

They are secured by first mortgage on 140 miles of this first-class road, its outfit, and all present and future acquired property of the Company.

They bear a high rate of interest for a long period of time—seven per cent. gold for forty years—and a small ratio to the cash value of the realty upon which they are issued.

They create an interest liability of the Company of only $1,240 per mile, or less than one-third that of some great roads of the country whose bonds have ranked very high.

These facts, added to the safeguards thrown around each and every bond, combine to render these UNEQUALED SECURITIES, and really the most desirable in the market for investment.

Price 95 and accrued interest in currency, the right being reserved to advance, upon due notice.

Pamphlets, with maps and full detail, furnished on application.

Adhering to our positive rule never to offer anything for sale which we do not ourselves believe to be good, we add that we have personally examined this entire line of road, finished and projected, as well as the country through which it runs, and its full character and capacity for verifying the foregoing estimates; the result of which is, that we offer these securities with every confidence in their full worth and soundness.

These bonds are only issued upon each section of the road as soon as it is completed and in full successful operation. Two and a half millions have been expended on this road. Eighty-three miles have now been built and equipped, and already show large earnings, and a balance of the line will be rapidly progressing.

Pamphlets and full particulars can be had on application.

HENRY CLEWS & CO.,
No. 32 Wall-st., New-York.
PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY,
PRESIDENT'S OFFICE,
PHILADELPHIA, May 11, 1869.

Messrs. Henry Clews & Co., No. 32 Wall-st.:

Gentlemen: I have examined the act of the 17th ult. for our opinion as to the condition and prospects of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railway, the character of the country through which it passes, and the probable success of the enterprise, we would state, that before accepting the trust imposed upon us by the First Mortgage Bonds of this Company, we had fully satisfied ourselves as to the practicability of the enterprise.

The road starts at one of the most flourishing cities on the Northern Mississippi River, and runs in a northwesterly direction up the great rich Cedar Valley, connecting at various points along the Line with six different railroads, now in active operation, nearly all of which must be, more or less, tributary or feeders to this road.

This enterprise is destined to become, in connection with others, now in operation or being constructed, one of the great trunk lines from Lake Superior via Cedar Rapids and Burlington to St. Louis, Peoria and to the East, over the Toledo, Peoria and Warsaw and the Pennsylvania Railroads, which we represent.

But aside from this, the populous condition of the country along the line of the road, its productiveness and wealth, give sufficient guarantee of a good local business, which, for any road, is the best reliance for success.

A good index of the prosperity and wealth of the country through which this road passes may be found in the fact that the Company reports over a million and a quarter of dollars subscribed and expended by the people along the line, in aiding the road for 100 miles of the work, and it is also a strong proof of the local popularity and necessity for the road.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. EDGAR THOMPSON,
President of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co.,
CHARLES L. FROST,
Pres't of the Tol., Peoria & Warsaw R. R. Co.,
Trustees.

NATIONAL CURRENCY FRAUDS.

Suspicions in the Treasury Department Aroused.

New Fractional Notes in Circulation in a Defective Manner.

OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION IN THIS CITY.

The TIMES has just come into the possession of some very startling and important information regarding an investigation now being made on the part of the Treasury Department at Washington for the purpose, it is alleged, of discovering certain frauds supposed to be connected with the issuance of the new fractional currency. The secret way in which the official investigation has been conducted, the reticence maintained by the Government concerning it, and the subterfuges used to divert public attention from it, afford good ground for believing that a quantity of the new currency, how large cannot be estimated at present, has been put into circulation in a fraudulent and surreptitious manner. The investigation was held in this City, but originated with Secretary BOUTWELL. About two weeks ago the latter was informed by one of his subordinates that some of the recently-issued twenty-five cent stamps had been presented to the Treasury for redemption, and that the discovery was made that they were defective in one particular, being without the usual red Treasury seal on the face. The fact was not one calculated to excite surprise or to be generally observed by most people, but to the Secretary and his assistants it suggested one of two things, either that gross frauds had been perpetrated, or that extreme carelessness had been used in putting the seal on the new currency by those engaged in that duty. Nothing has been ascertained as yet, however, to indicate to what extent the defective currency exists, but the investigation now being pursued is likely to establish the requisite testimony.

The contract for printing the new currency notes was made by Mr. BOUTWELL, who divided the work between the American Bank Note Company and the National Bank Note Company of this City. The former Company was empowered to execute the work on the obverse of the ten cent and fifty cent notes, the reverse being done by the other Company. The backs on the fifteen and twenty-five cent stamps were printed by the National, the faces being executed by the American. When the backs are printed by one Company they go to the other Company for the faces, after which they are forwarded to the capital, where they receive the United States seal. They are then ready for use. It will become apparent to every reader from the above statement of the manner in which the currency is prepared, that the attempt to clear the mystery surrounding the defective stamps referred to must necessarily be very difficult and protracted. It will be necessary for the Treasury Department to find out every minute particular connected with the printing of the stamps, commencing from the time that the bank note paper is issued to the two engraving companies in this City. It is only by a thorough examination of this sort that the Secretary will be enabled to state whether any currency was abstracted in this City or Washington, or whether the seal was accidentally omitted from the stamps during the stamping process.

THE OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION.

On Tuesday last a Commission was sent to this City by Mr. BOUTWELL with a view of obtaining the exact number of fractional currency notes (both printed and partially printed) now in the possession of the American Bank Note Company and the National Bank Note Company. The party consisted of Mr. WILSON, Chief of the Redemption and Issue Bureau of the Treasury Department, Mr. GUTHRIE, Captain JOHNSON and Mr. LINCOLN, together with twenty ladies, who were detailed to count the blank sheets and partly printed money in the possession of both Companies. The Commission arrived here on Tuesday evening, but did not make any announcement of their presence. It was intimated, however, that they were sent here to count the gold at the Sub-Treasury, but this story was probably circulated in the hope that it would divert public attention from the true motive of their visit. The investigation, for which the Companies were prepared by the briefest kind of notice, was inaugurated Wednesday. Mr. WILSON assigned ten counters to the American Bank Note Company, superintending their labors in person. Every facility was extended by the officers of the Company to aid the officers of the Commission. The counting was carried on from day to day, finally terminating on Saturday last. During its progress the officers of the Commission declined to furnish any details concerning it, one of them announcing that himself and his associates were not at liberty to divulge the least thing about it. About three million bank note sheets were accounted by the American, amounting to $12,000,000 worth of ten and fifty cent stamps. Mr. WILSON returned to Washington on Sunday, and subsequently rendered his report to Acting Secretary RICHARDSON. The report was highly satisfactory, resulting in an order to Mr. XAVIER, President of the Company, in which he was directed to continue the printing of the money allotted the Company.

The investigation at the National Bank Note Company's office has not yet been completed. It is being conducted under the supervision of Mr. GUTHRIE. It is but just to the officers of the Company to state that they emphatically deny that the investigation is being conducted for the purpose of discovering any frauds.

A Railroad War in New-Jersey.

An injunction has been obtained by a part of the directors of the Montclair Railway, restraining the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company from entering into an agreement to construct a railway from Caldwell to Newark. An account of the commencement of hostilities between the projectors of the two routes appeared in these columns in June last. Since that time the difficulties have been adjusted, and operations have been commenced in Concord for the building of the Montclair Railway by a route different from that over which the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company propose to build. For nearly two years the Montclair Railway Company canvassed the town of Caldwell for subscriptions to aid the construction of this road direct to Montclair. About $130,000 in subscriptions were obtained, and the projectors had nearly obtained the consent of the property owners, when a disagreement arose between the Commissioners and the project was for a time allowed to rest. Soon afterward the gentlemen representing Caldwell in the Board commenced negotiations with the Morris and Essex Railroad Company (now Delaware, Lackawanna and Western) for the extension of their Bloomfield branch over the mountains into Caldwell, leaving the Montclair people in the cold. A charter was obtained and about $60,000 was subscribed. The required sum was $200,000, and the Montclair people, headed by JULIUS H. PRAUST, who resided in the interest of the Midland Railroad Company, of which the Montclair Railway is, if completed, to form a part, appointed at a meeting where subscriptions were collected, subscribed for the majority of the stock, putting down the requisite ten per cent in cash, and pocketed control of the scheme. The Caldwell enterprise was, of course, abandoned, for its enemies had possession of the papers, and had the power to do what they pleased. The Caldwell men defeated, as they were, in their scheme, came to terms, and agreed to join in building the Montclair Road. The final surveys were made, and work was commenced when it was again rumored that the Caldwell men were in negotiations for the completion of their old project. The injunction was applied for, and was obtained, and the case will come up for argument in a few days. The Montclair Road will be but five miles in length, but it is important as a part of the Midland Railroad.

Slander in the Public Schools.

The Committee on By-laws, of the Board of Education, to whom was referred the subject of having the German language taught in the Public Schools, have held many sessions, and have listened to the views of representative Germans on the question, the result of which has been that the Committee have agreed upon a basis of adjustment of the controversy, which, it is believed, will be satisfactory to all parties. The report of the Committee will be presented for the consideration of the Board of Education this evening. Its main features are that the German language be allowed to be taught in those schools where a large portion of the pupils are of German parentage—the question to be determined by the school trustees of the various wards in

THE VANDERBILT BRONZES.

History to the Press by Captain De Groot—Speeches by Horace Greeley, Mr. Healey, Mr. Bouvevelt, Captain De Groot and Others.

Captain ALBERT DE GROOT, the designer and executor of the original, historical and biographical group known as the Vanderbilt bronzes, gave an entertainment to the New-York Press at the Astor House last evening, which was attended by about fifty members of the editorial fraternity, representing all the leading papers of the City.

HORACE GREELEY presided, and after the sumptuous feast had been duly appreciated, proposed the health of the host, who responded as follows:

SPEECH OF CAPTAIN DE GROOT.

GENTLEMEN: I ask your kind indulgence while I make a remark or two by way of explaining my object in requesting the honor of your presence here. I will detain you but a single moment. At various times in my humble life the newspapers of New-York have shown me much kindness. They have spoken approvingly and generously of various enterprises in which I have been engaged. On the occasion of unveiling the Vanderbilt bronzes, last Wednesday, I desired to exhibit, in some slight way, my heartfelt gratitude to the Press. I wished to make some acknowledgment, especially of the encouragement which you had extended to me in the execution of that novel and difficult work. For this purpose an entertainment was provided, at which I had hoped to have had the great pleasure of meeting you and others of my friends. That part of the programme was intrusted to a sub-committee, who were as anxious as I was that it should go off well. But, owing to a slight misunderstanding as to time and place, I was deprived of the happiness of meeting you in the manner proposed. Before resuming my seat, gentlemen, let me again proffer my warmest thanks for the many kindnesses that I have received at your hands, and to express my pleasure at meeting you here to-night. I shall always look back to it as one of the proudest and happiest moments of my life.

Mr. COHEN then read a letter from C. S. GOODRICH, Esq., in which, after regretting his inability to be present at the entertainment, he said that the Vanderbilt bronzes, in magnitude and originality, excelled anything of the kind to be found in Europe, and that the work deserved hearty commendation for its originality and as an example for still greater achievements in the same line by American artists.

REMARKS OF MR. GREELEY.

The health of the Chairman having been drank, Mr. GREELEY responded by saying that the letter of Mr. GOODRICH had placed the work of his friend, Captain DE GROOT, on the true ground. For himself he did not pretend to be a judge of such works of art; but one thing he did know—a child always had to creep before it could walk. The great necessity of New-York at the present time was the cultivation of a taste for art among the people; and out-door works of art, like the Vanderbilt bronzes, helped to educate the children of this and coming generations. Therefore he honored Captain DE GROOT for having done thus much. He had given an example to wealthy men to adorn public buildings and public and private gardens with the best works of art that they could command. If this work of Captain DE GROOT should stimulate others to higher and better achievements in art, no one would be more pleased than him. As for the subject of these bronzes—Commodore VANDERBILT—he knew little of him personally. Their spheres of life had run in different channels; he had never been connected with him in business; had neither borrowed of him nor loaned to him; but he regarded him as among our most enterprising and far-sighted business men, and one of whom and of whose career Americans might well feel proud. In conclusion, he hoped the Press of New-York, of which he was glad to see so large a representation here, would often in future have occasion to commend the creation of such works of art of which our City stood in so much need.

A toast to the Cincinnati Press was responded to briefly by Mr. HALSEY, of that city, following whom Mr. ROOSEVELT, of the Citizen, spoke for the weekly Press, and Mr. DUGANNE for the monthly Press.

OTHER SPEECHES.

Other gentlemen responded to different toasts during the evening, and the entertainment passed off in a very agreeable manner. A new work of art, by Captain DE GROOT, was exhibited in the dining room, consisting of a bronze medallion 6½ feet in height and nearly the same in width, in the centre of which was a life-size likeness of Commodore VANDERBILT, with a sailor on one side and an Indian in repose on the other, and the ocean in the background, with the steamship Vanderbilt in the distance. The weight of the bronze is over 1,000 pounds, and it is designed for a niche in the great railroad depot now in process of construction on Fourth-avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets.

Captain DE GROOT said this was the first time the work had been exhibited, and, as a work of art, it appeared to favorably impress the spectators.

SISTER THERESA.

Her Lecture Last Night Concerning the Catholic Clergy—She Repeats Her Story and Uses Some Strong Language with Regard to Them.

Miss Edith O'GORMAN, whose fortunes and misfortunes as Sister THERESA of the Catholic Convent in Hudson City, has formed the subject of many paragraphs in the newspapers, lectured in Jersey City last evening on the "Roman Catholic Clergy." She had delivered two lectures before her appearance last evening, and the manifestations of indignant feeling on the part of the Catholic portion of her audiences led to the expectation that an attack would be made upon her at her next appearance, or that, at the least, an attempt would be made to create a disturbance. No disturbance occurred, however. A large audience of the most respectable ladies and gentlemen of Jersey City were present, and policemen were stationed in the room. The lecture was delivered in the North Baptist Church. Miss O'GORMAN commenced her address by the assertion that the power of the Catholic clergy was almost unlimited, even in this land of free thought and free religion, and they used their power not for the good of the Catholic population but to extract money from their foolish dupes—money that was used in riotous living, debauchery and self-advancement. They preach what they do not practice, for they inculcate modesty and humility by their words, while their lives exhibit pride and intemperance. While they call upon their subjects to abstain from drink they themselves become often intoxicated, and in their drunken moments carry into practice the hellish designs of their sober moments. They know themselves that they are rogues and thieves and laugh at the simplicity of their dupes. God could be worshipped in plain churches as well as in costly temples; but in build these monuments to superstition the very life blood of the Catholic population is given. She referred to Spain and to France in proof of the pernicious influences of Romanism. The men in high places were prodigate in expenditure. The church now being erected in Hudson City, at a cost of $100,000, was to supplant one which had been scarcely eight years built. They were extortionate. Each Catholic who listened to it, had to pay $1 for each mass said by a priest. The speaker then detailed some of the facts connected with her personal history. When she fled from the Convent in Hudson City, she went to Bishop SPAULDING, hoping to find redress for her wrongs. He treated her as no man would treat a woman. She left his house, feeling that the clergy, from the highest to the lowest, were rotten to the very core. From Baltimore she had walked to Philadelphia, and on her way stopped to see a distinguished priest, and asked for help to proceed on her way. He asked her to become his housekeeper, or pass herself off as his niece, saying that he knew she was a woman, and could not say "No" to such a proposal. In conclusion, the speaker said that the Roman Catholic religion could not last long. The end would soon be. She would risk her life to help its coming.

The Outrage on the Schooner John Atwood—Further Particulars.

We are enabled this morning to give further particulars of the outrage perpetrated upon the American schooner John Atwood in the port of Sarasoa, Cuba, of which we made brief mention yesterday. The consignee of the vessel in Sarasoa was Señor ALATO, the American Consul at that port. The vessel cleared in regular form, and a pass was obtained permitting her to go by the Spanish fort, which pass was left, according to universal custom, with the consignee. While the schooner was in charge of the pilot, being towed out of port, she was hailed by a soldier on shore, who belonged to the Captain's guard in charge of the fort. The Captain was informed by the pilot that the pass was demanded, and it was at once explained that the pass had been left with ALATO. Not satisfied with this explanation, the soldier fired a rifle ball at the vessel, the main peak was immediately lowered, and every effort made to bring the vessel to. A boat also put off for the shore to make inquiry about the pass. Notwithstanding this compliance with every reasonable requirement of the case, the Spanish soldier took deliberate aim at one of the crew of the schooner while the vessel was drifting, and shot him through both legs with a rifle ball, a flagrant violation of the law of nations. The Captain was detained at Sarasoa two days by the affair, and the wounded sailor was left in charge of a physician, and will probably never recover the use of his limbs. It appears that the pass for the schooner had been sent to the Consul-general of the fort by Señor ALATO, but in view of the prompt action of the Captain in lowering the main peak on the firing of the first shot, the subsequent shooting of one of the schooner's men was an outrage of the most flagrant description.

STARTLING RUMOR.

The Spanish Gunboats of Delaware—Said to be in Peril—Threatened Burning by the Cubans—What Our Government Will Do.

The work of completing the Spanish flotilla, now lying at the Delamater Iron Works, is proceeding rapidly, and there is every prospect of the vessels' completion by the first week in December. Moored in tiers, side by side, in the Delamater basin, the little craft present a busy scene. On their decks, joiners and ship carpenters are engaged in putting the finishing touches to the houses, companion ways and rails; sailmakers and riggers are bending sails, reeving down and painting rigging and setting up shrouds and backstays; below and in the cuddies, cabinet makers, upholsterers and tinsmiths devote themselves to rendering the future homes of the nautical Dons as comfortable as possible. Still all this work and trouble may be of little service to Spain, inasmuch as the United States authorities are fully determined, for aught any one yet knows to the contrary, to hold the craft perpetually. The little steamer, a steamer Morris, from the Navy Yard, watches faithfully over them while they are being worked upon. When ready for sea there is every probability that the authorities will remove the fleet to the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

A startling rumor is abroad, to the effect that the vessels are to be burned and scuttled by the enemies of Spain, while lying at their docks on the Hudson. There is good reason to believe that the friends of Cuba and Peru have long regarded them with anxiety. Fearing that our Government may be prevailed upon to release the craft, they will probably strike a desperate blow at them while yet there is time to do it. Dark November nights, when the storm clouds hide the moon and stars, it will be very easy for some expert Hudson River pirate, in the pay of the enemies of Spain, to creep quietly along shore, enter the basin in his light shallop, dash the sides of the first two or three vessels in the tier with bluestone, apply the torch, and in a few moments the whole will be ablaze. They are built of wood, moored side by side, and should a fresh breeze be blowing, a conflagration which would cost the tier to start the fire so that it will burn rapidly and well. In such an event the fleet would be destroyed long before assistance could arrive, and if any vessels were saved from the devouring element, it would only be by scuttling and sinking them, which would attain the object of the incendiaries just as well as the destruction by fire. The rumor may be groundless, but it is exceedingly probable. A strong guard of watchmen will be constantly stationed on board the vessels, who will watch as night carefully, and suffer none to approach them.

The Spanish transport Buenos, which returned from Havana a few days ago, is also at the Delamater Iron Works, undergoing repairs.

Meeting of the Gold Board—The Affairs of the Gold Exchange Bank.

The cashier of the Gold Exchange Bank, Mr. RUSSELL, yesterday afternoon, presented to the Gold Board, in compliance with its request, a statement of the financial condition of the Gold Exchange Bank, setting forth the following figures:

Cash in bank	$154,400 00
In Manhattan Trust Company	100,000 00
Bills receivable	30,000 00
In other banks	15,000 00
Vault and fixtures	10,000 00
Fines, &c.	4,200 00
Deposits	194,000 00
Claims to be litigated	50,000 00

Mr. RUSSELL declined to give the information desired in referring to questions we have failed to make good their clearance since the 24th of September, on the ground of inexpediency.

The report of the Clearing House Committee as printed, was read by sections, and adopted.

Mr. RUSSELL also stated that all outstanding accounts arising out of litigation between members of the Gold Board and the New-York Gold Exchange Bank would be referred to the Arbitration Committee for decision, and by their report the Gold Exchange Bank would cheerfully abide.

The resolutions adopted Monday denying all but members of the Gold Board the privileges of the Clearing House, were rescinded.

The Kings County Election Canvass.

The canvassers of Kings County yesterday completed the canvass of the returns of the city wards, excepting the returns which were regarded as fraudulent. These were returned to canvassers for correction. The returns from the Third District of the Twentieth Ward, notwithstanding the intimation of fraud in the matter of the votes for member of Assembly, Mr. W. W. GOODRICH claiming to have been cheated out of votes enough to defeat him, were adopted as correct.

Having finished the city wards, the Board proceeded to canvass the county towns, and will resume its business to-day.

Trap Shooting.

Mr. HENRY BERGH, President of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, sends us a note, in which he says that "the season being near when the 'sport,' as it is termed, of tying fowls to stones and otherwise, and shooting at them on the water, is practiced, he would kindly, and in the spirit of humanity, remind all persons about to engage in this cruel and demoralizing pastime that it is contrary to law, and that this Society has taken the necessary measures to enforce the same by the arrest and punishment of offenders discovered in the violation thereof."

Colored Labor Meeting.

A meeting in the interest of colored workingmen was held last evening at Bethel Church, Sullivan-street, which was addressed by AARON A. BRADLEY, of Georgia, and Mr. TROOP, of this City. Mr. TROOP expressed the hearty cooperation of the national Labor Union with the purposes of the colored laborers, and urged them to organize themselves into unions and associations.

Mr. BRADLEY spoke at length on the conflict of labor and capital, especially as exemplified in the struggle of the negro race for its rights.

One of the signs of the times, and a very great sign indeed, is that sign of KNOX, the hatter, corner of Broadway and Fulton-street. It is an ominous sign, too, to all who think that KNOX did intend to retire and leave the field to his unsuccessful competitors. When a man puts up a sign like the one recently erected by KNOX, he means business, and that is just what KNOX means. He means to sell more Hats and Furs this Fall than ever. And what is more, he will do it. Remember the big sign of KNOX's when you desire a stylish hat or the best FUR. KNOX can accommodate you at low prices.
